ROSS IS FAVORITE IN MARATHON

DR. FRANK WRIGHT TO HEAD STATE EDUCATION

Seventh Ward Gas Station Is Robbed

James Kennedy, aged 20, attendant in charge of the Wray Gasoline Station, Clayton and North Liberty streets, when held up at the point of an automatic gun about nine o'clock last night, by a stranger, who first made the pretense of inquiring the way to Charleroi and other points, was forced to see the man take the bills in the cash register and drive away.

Takes Bills From Register.

The holdup man took only the bills in the register, leaving behind the small change in the register, according to Officers Logan, Moore and M. J. Young, who answered the call for police assistance.

According to the information secured by the investigating officers, the holdup man drove up to the station in a 1926 model Ford coupe, the license number of which was not secured.

He made the pretense of trying to get information concerning the best routes to Charleroi and other points. Having given the information, all of a sudden Kennedy found himself covered with an automatic revolver in the hands of the stranger, who had evidently employed this method of determining that the attendant was alone.

License Number Not Secured.

The stranger then rifled the cash register, got into his car and drove away. Kennedy spread the alarm and the police were called, but owing to the fact that the license number of the car had not been secured, it was found difficult to trace the car and man.

The holdup man was described by Kennedy as being smooth faced, about thirty years of age, weighing about 150 pounds and being about five feet eight or nine inches in height. He wore a brown overcoat, a dirty gray cap and tan oxfords.

This is the second time in a comparatively short time that this service station has been robbed, a sneak thief taking a considerably larger amount recently while the attendant was busy with a customer.

Former Lawrence County Educator Is Likely Choice

Semi-Official Report Says He Will Be Superintendent Of Public Instruction

SPENT HIS BOYHOOD AT NEW WILMINGTON

Went To Westminster And Taught New Wilmington High School

More than ordinary interest is being shown in the tentative appointments for Governor-Elect John W. Fisher's cabinet, due to the fact that Dr. Frank W. Wright, assistant commissioner of education in Massachusetts, is the probable appointee for the post of superintendent of public instruction.

Dr. Frank Wright is a Lawrence county man. For most of his early life he resided in New Wilmington. He attended Westminster college, and for a time after his school days was principal of the New Wilmington high school. He has been in educational work in this state and in Massachusetts for the past 25 years.

From Philadelphia, the International News Service today sends the following on the probable selections to be made by Governor-elect Fisher.

Mrs. McCauley May Be Named.

The reported appointment of Mrs. E. S. McCauley of Beaver county to succeed Dr. Ellen C. Potter as secretary of public welfare and the last minute decision to appoint Charles E. Waters of Germantown to the post of secretary of labor and industries by Governor-elect John S. Fisher in forming his cabinet was the chief topic of conversation in Republican circles here today as the indicated time neared for the formal announcement of the makeup of the cabinet.

A. Boyd Hamilton, Fisher's secretary, will return here today from Harrisburg and make the formal announcement of the list of appointments at the state headquarters of the Republican party here late today, according to reliable reports. The governor-elect, who is at his home at Indiana, will not re-

Officers Scout Tale Of Man Discovered Clinging To Pier

Man Confesses To Firing Mill, Says Detective

Kennedy States Flickinger Admits Setting Fire To Edenburg Mill

WAS AGGRIEVED AT OWNER OF MILL

Fire Occurred Last May—Confession Is Made Late Friday

George S. Kennedy of the district attorney's office, late Friday solved the $35,000 fire which entirely destroyed the Cole's grist mill and contents in May, at Edenburg and as a result John W. Flickinger is in jail and will be charged with arson.

According to Kennedy Flickinger was grilled at the district attorney's office Friday afternon and not only confessed to the alleged crime but signed a statement telling when, now and why he committed the alleged act.

Under Suspicion.

According to Kennedy who has been investigating the fire since May 28 he had John William Flickinger aged 25 of Edenburg under spsipcion but had not been able to find any clues.

Recently a warrant was sworn out against Flickinger and when he was apprehended by William Edwards of Hillsville an attache of the district attorney's office, he was placed in jail.

Yesterday Kennedy went to the county jail and took Flickinger to the district attorney's office for questioning. After a stiff grilling Kennedy claims he broke down and confessed.

According to the statement in the possession of District Attorney Bryan, Flickinger says he left his home on May 22 about 11:30 p. m. and went to the Judson F. Cole mill.

He then went along the P. and L. E. tracks to a siding below the signal block and obtained some "dope" from a journal box on a car.

Flickinger said that the waste was grease and oil soaked and that he then went back to the northeast corner of the flour mill.

The young man confessed, according to Kennedy, that he found a small piece of weather stripping

The man found clinging to a pier of the P. R. R. bridge, Beaver river, at Wampum, has given his name as Sam Lebdts, Madison avenue, New York City, according to Constable Sharp Leslie, detailed by District Attorney J. Elder Bryan to investigate the case.

The man is in the Eliwood City hospital suffering from a jagged hole in his neck, but he will recover, according to physicians.

Self Inflicted Wound.

The wound, according to Leslie, was self-inflicted by a knife while the man was melancholy or temporarily deranged.

Lebdts told rescuers that he had been shot and later told Leslie he had been hurled from the bridge. Leslie does not believe his stories.

Leslie told the district attorney that he believes Lebdts stood on the bank of the river and slashed his own throat then fell or waded into the water to hurry life's end.

According to the constable, he believes the act was done on account of Lebdt's being out of work or during a fit of temporary derangement.

Leslie visited the bridge and declares it would have been impossible to live had he been thrown from it. There are no evidences of bullet wounds in Lebdts' neck.

Lebdts said he lived on Madison avenue, New York, and had recently gone to Ambridge where he was arrested. He was given a dollar and turned free.

Wandered Around.

He could not tell how he reached Wampum but said he arrived on Thursday morning at 9 o'clock where he was "followed by a crowd of 25 men on acount of 'hooch'."

Leslie tried to find out what he

The occasion was the gathering on the island of 153 swimmers of all ages, sizes and degrees of ability and from all parts of the United States and Canada to compete in the $40,000 Wrigley ocean marathon between Isthmus Cove, near here, and Perdo Point, Los Angeles Harbor.

Quota Club Show Is Most Pleasing Local Production

"Fi-Fi Of The Toy Shop" Is Presented In Cathedral Auditorium Friday Night

LARGE CAST DOES EXCELLENT WORK

Musical Extravaganza Is Replete With Catchy Music And Spectacles

Rag dolls, paper dolls, French and English dolls, and a whole toy shop full of dolls come to life, made up an evening of entertainment Friday, January 14, when the Quota club of New Castle presented its second annual doll show in the Scottish Rite cathedral, and at the same time, presented "Fi-Fi of the Toy Shop" in the auditorium in a most successful and pleasing manner.

Your preference of the two attractions is probably governed by whether or not you like your dolls animate or inanimate. Or perhaps you went the limit and saw both.

Large Cast in Play.

The play contained one of the largest, possibly the largest, cast ever seen in a production here, and while the large part of them were in the choruses, the cast of principals was also large.

So large in fact that no attempt will be made here to set out the merits of each one. The plot of the play is a light one as you probably know. Bonnie, a little girl whose father keeps a toy shop, falls asleep and dreams that all the dolls have suddenly come to life. As the dream is developed the dolls unfold the theme, in which Fi-Fi, the French doll, falls in love with several of the male dolls, runs off with the man in the moon and finally marries the sturdy Lieutenant Tin Heart.

Dorothy Jean Wallace had the lead in the play as Bonnie, with Mrs. Robert E. Fleming as Fi-Fi, Joseph Stritmater as the man in the moon, Norman Cotton as Tin Heart, Virginia Reeher carrying the comedy relief as Ink Spot, Allan Haid as Prince Lolly Pop and Mrs. William Whieldon as Loosey the Rag Doll.

Others in the supporting cast were Lucille Emery as Aurelia the Witch, Eleanor Hutchison as the Fairy Queen, Robert Turner as Captain Barnacle, William McCombs as the Sandman, Virginia Bauman as the Doll's Head, Helen Queer as

New York Feels Frigid Weather

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Northwest winds today ushered in a cold wave which may smash all records here for the winter, according to the weather bureau.

When the full force of the cold wave is felt the mercury will drop to near zero, probably touching the lowest point tomorrow morning.

The cold spell will probably remain until Monday, when a gradually rising temperature is forecast.

Storms, reported sweeping eastward out of the middle west, struck this district late yesterday and today without the biting snow storms which were prevalent thruout the midwest, the U. S. weather bureau here reported.

Indications were that today's cold would be dispelled by warmer weather Sunday.

Court Order Is Needed To Impound Election Ballots

Both Vare And Wilson Attend Session Held In Capital Today

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The ballots cast in Pennsylvania's recent senatorial election can only be impounded by the senate through a court order, Mayor W. Freeland Kendrick, of Philadelphia, told the Reed campaign fund committee today. The committee seeks the ballots for a recount in the contest brought by William B. Wilson, D., to unseat Senator-Elect William S. Vare.

Kendrick said he believed "it would have to be done by order of the Common Pleas court."

"I am very willing to turn the ballots over if the court agrees," said Kendrick.

Both Wilson and Vare attended the session.

Senator Heflin Places New Castle Man's Letter Before Session Of Senate

BY GEORGE H. MANNING
Washington Correspondent Of The New Castle News

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 15.—Since his criticism of the Fall-Doheny trial and its outcome, uttered in the senate chamber shortly after the announcement of the decision in the oil case, Senator J. Thomas Heflin of Alabama, has been flooded with messages both of congratulation and condemnation.

Senator Heflin, in several spirited addresses, attacked the decision of acquittal which was rendered in the Fall-Doheny trial, and criticized Judge Hoehling, who officiated, and the jury for its display of levity during the proceedings. He charged corruption in a number of government activities.

Among the numerous messages which he has received, was one from Edward J. Davis of New Castle, Pa., which Senator Heflin placed before the senate today. This letter commended the senator for his stand on the case. It read:

"Dear Senator Heflin: All American citizens of proper fiber should be, and I believe are, in full accord with your remarks the subject matter of which was the 'Fall-Doheny charges and the farce trial and verdict'.

"It does seem at times that 'The Mel-on-Koolidge days are here—the saddest possible of any year.

"The results of conditions under which we now live and move and have our being indicate that—

"'Tis mean to rob a henroost of its hen,
But stealing largely makes us gentlemen.'

"May your gift of expression and privilege to use same along right lines and in defense of truth and right never grow less.

"Sincerely and respectfully yours,
EDWARD J. DAVIS."

Sub-Zero Wave After Blizzard

Chicago Reports From Seven To 12 Below At Early Hour This Morning

FRIGID WAVE COMES DOWN FROM CANADA

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—With the snow-laden blizzard passed on to the east, Chicago and the entire Middle West shivered today in a sub-zero wave that followed in the wake of the storm. Unofficially this morning the mercury in Chicago stood from seven to 12 below zero.

Eight deaths here in the past two days have been attributed directly to the severe cold.

The frigid wave blew in from the Canadian Northwest, following the course taken by the snow storm of two days ago. No immediate relief is in sight, according to weather bureau forecasts. The cold wave is expected to reach the Atlantic seaboard late tonight or tomorrow.

The extreme cold centered over the northern plain states. International Falls, Minn., on the Canadian border, with a temperature of 27 degrees below zero, was the coldest spot in the United States. Devil's Lake, N. D., reported 21 below.

The blanket of cold extended southwest into northern Texas and Oklahoma. Temperatures ranging well below freezing were reported from the Panhandle district. Cities in Missouri reported temperatures ranging from eight to 14 above.

Prohibition Will Celebrate Eighth Birthday Sunday

Enforcement Chief Has Little To Say On Eve Of Anniversary

SMUGGLING RINGS BEING UNCOVERED

Report Government Agents Have Evidence On Huge Bribe Offers

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—In the centre of a whirlpool of public controversy, political and otherwise, prohibition will celebrate its eighth birthday in the United States tomorrow.

General Lincoln C. Andrews, enforcement chief, said upon his assumption of office eighteen months ago that if he didn't make material progress in "drying up" the country in a year he would resign.

Andrews Is Silent

Today the General declined to make any prediction as to the present state of aridity or the future of the dry movement, other than to say that the government had a well organized dry machine and that provided legislation recommended to congress is enacted a long step can be taken in closing sources of bootleg supply.

On the eve of the anniversary government undercover agents were completing the investigation of a dozen large smuggling rings, representing a capitalization of close to $100,000,000.

One ring alone is said to be operating on a payroll of $1,000,000 a month. Profits of the various rings have been enormous in the last year.

The rum trust likewise has a heavy overhead a big item of which comes under the head of bribery of public officials. Evidence that literally millions of dollars in bribe money has been offered to officials

Aerial Suicide, Is Successful

(International News Service)

ALICANTE, Jan. 15.—What is probably the first aerial suicide in history was reported here today.

Aurice Coucher, a French citizen, is reported to have committed suicide by jumping from a pasenger aeroplane flying between Toulouse and Casablanca. The pilot of the aeroplane did not see the man jump, but feeling his plane lightened looked around and saw the passenger's overcoat hanging from the rugger with no trace of passenger.

May Use Tokens On Street Cars

Change From Tickets Likely To Be Made Here In Near Future

TICKET EXPENSE CAUSE OF MOVE

It is reported that within the near future a different system than the ticket plan will be put into effect by Pennsylvania-Ohio railway officials here and street car riders will "pay their fare with tokens."

The tokens will be of brass composition about as large as a dime and may contain the letters "N. C." so that they cannot be used in other cities.

At the present time tickets mean the same as money when street car riders pay their fare. Cost of printing tickets is a big item.

Once a ticket is used, it has outlived its usefulness and the printer's bill is no small matter, according to report.

According to the plan eight tokens will be sold for 50 cents which is the ticket rate.

The tokens can be used for years before they are worn out but a ticket is used only once. Hence the proposed move is but one for economical reasons.

Another Robin Is Now Reported

Mrs. S. C. Lyda of Meyer avenue lays claim of having seen the first robin of the winter at her home last Sunday.

Mrs. Lyda who has a very tender heart for all oppressed and dependent creatures has a flock of pet snow birds which she feeds every morning and sometimes evening on her back porch.

Last Sunday Sir Robin presented himself for a bite or two being very cold and hungry after his long trip from the sunny south. He was immediately set upon by the irate snow birds and chased from the porch and has not been seen in that community since.

The cheery little fellow has probably started southward again believing that the birds that live in this climate during the winter have hearts as cold as the ice and snow which covers the ground.

The boy had reached the foot of the hill and had gotten off his sled when he was struck by another sled which was coming back of him.

There's a lot of cherry noses, and a host of frosty ears, and some whiskers that are sprinkled with a lot of icy tears. For the weather man is raging and his aides are full of glee, for they're out to freeze the innards of the folks like you and me. Sweet young things with fair complexions are as ruddy as a rose, for they will not wear their woollens, and they must have silken hose, and they shiver as they pass us, they could hardly last a mile, but the cold they will endure, just to be right up in style. Old Jack Frost is surely with us, though the air is crisp and fine, and old Zero nearly has us, for its ten above the line.

Protest Against American Seizure Of Ammunition

Sacasa Government Protests Admiral Latimer Acted Indiscreetly

INDEMNITY IS NOW DEMANDED

(International News Service)

BLUEFIELDS, Nicaragua, Jan. 15.—The American consulate here has received a vigorous protest from the foreign minister of the Liberal government at Purto Cabezas, against the action of Admiral Latimer in ordering some 2,000,000 rounds of ammunition and 700 rifles seized at Grande and thrown into the river.

The Sacasa government charges that in neutralizing Grande, Admiral Latimer seized Liberal war material without justification and ordered it destroyed.

Indemnity is demanded by the Sacasa government.

Reports circulated from Managua that the Sacasa government is on the point of giving up its fight were denied by reports reaching here from Purto Cabezas, the Liberal capital. The indications are that the Sacasa government will continue until entirely blocked in its efforts. At the present time the Liberal movement in north-west Nicaragua appears to be agining considerable headway and the American penetration has not been as effective there. Reports of some fighting with the trend of victory going to the Liberals have been received here.

QUOTA CLUB SHOW IS MOST PLEASING LOCAL PRODUCTION

Bo-Peep, Harriet Martin as the Jap Doll, Pauline Rodgers as the Talking Doll, Robert MacKenzie as Tack Hammer the Toy Maker, and Vilho Mackey and Andy Tasky as the Clowns.

There were some high spots in the performance that might be mentioned, although all did well. The singing of Joseph Stritmater and Mrs. Fleming, the all around work of Miss Wallace, the colored antics of Miss Reeher and the very clever dancing of two little maids, Velma Sontag and Ruth Phillips.

Choruses Pleasing.

The choruses were pleasing in appearance. The Fairies with about 125 little girls dressed in white were a spectacle. The Live Letter Blocks furnished an interesting bit of by-play, the Brides Maids were an eyefull, and the China Dolls and Paper Dolls did some cute dancing. The Jumping Jacks were just that, and cunning in the bargain. The Noah's Ark Animals were pleasing to the eye.

This was the first time the Scottish Rite cathedral stage had been used for a play, and the cast and the audience discovered early that this was not an ordinary stage, and that a lot more than ordinary voice was needed. This defect was soon discovered and remedied.

The dol show in the lobby of the cathedral provided an interesting scene. Scores of dolls, pretty ones, odd ones, appealing ones, and all of them entered for the Quota club doll show. Between acts, C. Ed Brown gave away eight dolls to holders of lucky numbers. This stunt will be repeated this afternoon and evening.

The profits of the venture will accrue to the project of the Quota club, the Crawford Oak Ridge home and judging from the first night crowd, the receipts should add materially to the fund being built for this most worthy purpose.

The program is being repeated this afternoon and will also be presented this evening.

The personnel of the choruses was as follows:

Live Letter Blocks—Maxine Bollard, Peggy Griffith, Clarissa Duff, Dorothy Schriver, Mary Christman, Ruby Rowland, Helen Barr, Frances Aiken.

Smuggling Rings

Details of a number of the smuggling rings will be presented to Federal grand juries within the next few months, according to officials. Most of the evidence was obtained through the operation of government "speakeasies" in New York and other cities, which have been the butt of a strong attack from congressional wets.

Most of the liquor conspiracies center in New York. A few operating on the Gulf and Pacific coasts and around Chicago are under investigation.

Congressional attacks against the government's prohibition policy were characterized at the Treasury as an effort to embarrass enforcement. The objective of the congressional attacks was declared to be appeal of the prohibition laws on the grounds that they cannot be enforced.

Andrews indicated that no change in policy is contemplated.

Fisher Cabinet To Be Announced Monday Morning

Governor-Elect Has Completed Cabinet List, Pleads For Quiet Sunday

(International News Service)

INDIANA, Pa., Jan. 15.—Governor-Elect John Fisher will announce the personnel of his cabinet on Monday morning, January 17, he said here today. The governor-elect said that his list is completed, and is to be made public shortly before he leaves his home here for Harrisburg for the inauguration.

Swamped by routine duties attendant upon his departure, Fisher made the announcement through the International News Service to afford him relief from the host of inquirers as to his selections, and partisans who have flooded his office with telephone calls making last minute pleas in behalf of favorite sons, he said, and to allow him to spend a quiet Sunday with his friends in Indiana.

The governor-elect will leave Indiana on Monday for Harrisburg, where he will be inaugurated as successor to Gov. Gifford Pinchot on January 18.

The high court held that it is within the power of the state legislature to determine wha should be taught in tax supported schools, and that the anti-evolution act did not violate the state constitution.

GUESS OUR ROBIN GOT HERE EARLY

The Robin Redbreast who thought he had found spring Thursday when he escaped from a box car at the Pennsylvania freight station surely will "fly to the barn to keep himself warm and hide his head under his winf, poor thing."

For the cold wave struck New Castle with a vengeance last night and today.

The cold wind last night swept across the streets and although several atempts were made by the snowflakes to lay a white blanket even they had to give up at last and this mornig the termometer dropping steadily until it hit about 4 above and would probably still keep going down but Old Sol every once in a while would put out his finger and push it up a few degrees.

Yet with the wind blowing at such a terrific speed it makes 7 above feel like 10 below.

Weekly Letter

Fellow Rotarian:—

We have looked back at the accomplishments of the past in New Castle through the medium of a the future with the help of a prominent ex-president of the Kiwanis club. The Community Service Committee have covered the palm of this seer, Thomas W. Dickey, Esquire, and he will give us "A Look into the Future of the City's Development."

The committee probably had good reasons for the selection of a Kiwanian to speak on the future instead of a Rotarion. Brother Richard will very likely have a good alibi if it is not spoiled by interuptions from the Knocker's committee. The treasurer may also object to any palm-greasing but a rosy picture of the future is worth more than the picture of a person. Eat very lightly Sunday and Monday because Sir Bill McLaughry expects to eat two dozen buckwheat cakes and portions of ground up Lawrence county deceased hogs.

MAN CONFESSES TO FIRING MILL SAYS DETECTIVE

missing from the building about 18 inches from the ground

Applies Match.

He confessed to Kennedy, the statement shows that he lighted a match and applied the flame to the waste after which he fled to Stop 40 where he boarded a car for New Castle.

Flickinger told of reaching New Castle at 2:30 a. m. and of staying here until 10 a. m. when he took a car for Edenburg.

He could see, according to the confession alleged, from the car where the mill had stood and that it had been burned down.

He says the reason for his alleged act was because his father had secured some credit from Cole who operates the mill and the actions of Cole following.

He alleged that he went to the mill for some horse feed and that he gave Cole $2 and alleges that Cole did not want to give him any change.

He wanted to apply the change, he said to his father's bill and Flickinger says his mother had to go to Cole and tell him that she had made the money washing before he would give the change. She told Cole, according to the young man's confession, that she did not propose paying the elder Flickingers bills out of her wash money.

The young man also told Kennedy that Cole at one time had had him arrested on a charge of robbing his money box in the mill af valuable bonds and a raincoat.

According to Judson Cole, mill owner, the property was one of the biggest for grist purposes in this section and that the building alone was worth $25,000 and that the contents ruined were worth $10,000.

OFFICERS SCOUT TALE OF MAN DISCOVERED CLINGING TO PIER

meant by his statement of "on account of hooch" but Lebdts did not elaborate on that statement.

Lebdts told Constable Leslie that he wandered about Wampum until 6 o'clock, started across the P. R. R. bridge, was followed by three men and thrown into the river.

The wounded man said he managed to make his way to the bank where he laid on the stones all night.

This story does not fit in with the stories he told when found clinging to the pier.

When he was hauled to safety he said he had been shot.

The slight abrasion on the forehead, Leslie reported to the district attorney, could have been caused by falling after he had cut his throat in a jagged manner.

It is possible that while bleeding and in pain the man waded into the river and was washed to the pier where he clung until found by Howard Allen and rescued by Wampum men.

Among Lebdts' effects is an honorable discharge from the United States army. He is of Russian birth and was sent to the World war from New Jersey. He was at Camp Dix several months.

Ellwood City hospital attendants believe he will recover.

Norris Defense Counters With Eye-Witness

Make Attempt To Offset Surprise Witness Offered By State

By KENNETH WENDLER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

COURT ROOM, Austin, Texas, Jan. 15.—Making strenuous efforts to offset the surprise testimony for the state by Mrs. Roxie Parker, eyewitness to the killing of D. E. Chipps by Rev. J. Frank Norris of Fort Worth, the defense in Norris' murder trial this morning played a trump card by submitting one of its own witnesses to the killing.

L. H. Nutt, trustee of Norris' First Baptist church, was placed on the stand and testified he was in the study arranging a Sunday school schedule when Chipps came on his ill-fated visit to the pastor.

Attorneys, jurors and Judge J. R. Hamilton gathered around the church model, the better to see and hear Nutt trace the story of the killing.

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 15.—Washington high school will grant a pupil's wish, expressed as he lies in a dying condition at a hospital here as the result of injuries suffered in a coasting accident recently.

READY TO START SWIMMING RACE FROM CATALINA

Young is a swimmer of the speedy type, although he is not considered as fast as the Chicago contestant.

Henry Sullivan of Lowell, Mass., and Charles Toth of Long Beach, Cal., two men who have conquered the English Channel, are also conceded better than even chances of finishing the race.

Mark Wheeler, a Los Angeles policeman, and Leo Purcell, an Olympic Club swimmer from San Francisco, are a pair of others who are figured to be among the first to land at Pedro Point.

George A. Creegan of Paterson, N. J., only Y. M. C. A. entry in the marathon, is given a fair chance to finish. Emako Dulco, an Eskimo claims to have crossed Bering Straits, is another entry who has attracted attention.

For one young swimmer the winning of the race means more than the $25,000 first prize which will be awarded to the contestant who reaches the mainland first. He is Louis Timson of Boston, American Legion entry in the big swim.

Gertrude Ederle, first woman to conquer the English Channel, has promised Timson, according to report, that she will marry him if he wins the Catalina race.

Temperature of the water along the race course ranges from 52 to 57 degrees.

Lull Occurs In Suit Against Ford Company

(International News Service)

DETROIT, Jan. 15.—A week-end lull was in effect today in the hearing of the government's $34,000,000 tax suit against Sen. James Couzens and other former members of the Ford Motor company.

One of the outstanding features on the record is Henry Ford's letter of resignation from the presidency of the Ford company in 1918, tendered when the Ford organization was split wide open.

One sentence in the letter is stressed by attorneys for Couzens and the other petitioners. It states Ford's intention of devoting more time to building up "other organizations with which I am connected." The petitioners also point out that soon after the letter of resignation was submitted Ford gave out an interview in which he threatened to quit the Ford company, and manufacture a new car to undersell the Ford. This threat forced the minority stockholders to sell out to Ford, it is said.

AUTO SHOWS U. S. VAST WEALTH

INAUGURATION of the 1927 automobile year by the New York automobile show has produced some interesting figures on the automotive industry, a subject of universal interest in this automotive age.

Accustomed as this generation is to the motor car, it is not a little staggered by statistics revealing a 1926 production of 4,480,000 automobiles and motor trucks having a total wholesale value of $3,056,950,000. One realizes why streets and highways are congested with motor traffic when told that there are 22,330,000 motor vehicles in the United States, or seven for each mile of highway.

Some inkling of the great extent to which this country is dependent upon this huge industry is given in the survey showing that there are a half million more people employed in the automobile and allied industries than there are highway miles in this country. If the automobile were to be discarded today 3,500,000 people would be deprived of employment.

A nation of 115,000,000 people which can spend in one year nearly $4,000,000,000 for motor vehicles, $1,000,000,000 for tires, $600,000,000 for automobile parts and accessories, untold millions for automobile repairs and housing, $735,226,000 in motor vehicle taxes and more millions for motor fuel and lubrication is rich far beyond the wildest fancy of the early Egyptians in all their ancient splendor.

Further proof of the vast wealth and prevailing high standard of living in this country is found in America's possession of eighty-one per cent of the world's automobiles.

CIRCUMAVIATION OF THE ATLANTIC

THE PLAN of two French military aviators to organize an "Atlantic Circle" flight may make good reading, but it seems to be just another idea without financial backing either by governmental or commercial interests.

That has been the trouble with most of the expeditions announced for the crossing of the Atlantic under European auspices within the past year. One got to the point of actual construction of an airplane, but it was found to have too great a fuel consumption for the task to be undertaken.

Yet the Atlantic has been crossed by British, American, Spanish and Portuguese aviators. There are two comparatively narrow passages between Dakar, Africa, and the Cape Verdi Islands and Pernambuco in South America and between Newfoundland and Ireland. Both of these "straits" have been crossed without trouble at speeds of 100 miles an hour or better.

Nobody has made the return trip, though the Spanish expedition to the Argentine considered a plan to return by flying northward from South America to the United States, thence to Newfoundland and then across either to Ireland or to the Azores.

Our naval airplane expedition followed the route from Newfoundland to the Azores as the easiest, while Alcock and Brown made the crossing direct in one magnificent "do-or-die" effort.

The real pioneering opportunities at the present time are to be found in the airplane crossing of the Atlantic Ocean in direct flight from or to New York or the crossing of the Pacific between San Francisco and Hawaii.

MAY BE BETTER COOKS, BUT—

ONE of the boys over in the British Isles ventures the claim that men are better cooks than women, though the female cook outnumbers the male many times over. Of course this daring claim will not go unchallenged by the ladies but that there are some facts which tend to sustain it no man will deny.

It is pointed out that men are more interested in food, and therefore more successful in its preparation. It sounds plausible. That may explain why men make better automobile drivers, since they are more interested in mechanics. But putting aside this reason, it may be worth while to look into the cooking question, lest both sexes miss something by permitting femininity to hold absolute sway over the kitchens of the world.

Woman, tradition has it, is the conserver, the one who husbands the family resources and preserves the continuation of the race. It is just possible that her concern in this direction may impart a slightly parsimonious flavor to the food under her hand, in the interest of health and economy. She may save eggs and butter, and although her motives are unimpeachable, still the product suffers from her thriftiness.

Little recks man of budgets and calories. To him eggs are laid and butter churned to be used, and he employs them with reckless abandon when the preparation of the dinner comes under his personal direction. The result is some admirable achievements in the culinary art.

But let not the ladies of the mystic pantry misunderstand this panegyric on man the cook as a plea from him for a chance in the kitchen. With the exception of those men who have made cooking their profession, masculinity has no desire to crowd the ladies out of the hot kitchen. Come to think of it, the meals now coming out of the kitchen are not half bad.

The good may die young, but that fact is not disturbing the mortality tables.

What many persons need is currency so elastic that it will stretch from one pay day to another.

Hints and Dints

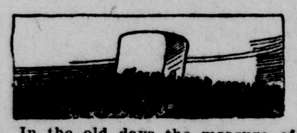

Sun sets tonight 4:59. Sun rises tomorrow 7:22.

A local man claims he bought a suit of clothes in this city just about twenty dollars less than the same suit was offered him in Pittsburgh. It pays to buy anything in New Castle.

We are told to do something each day to make other people happy. That's easy. Just let them alone.

It's all right for people to get all dressed up when they leave New Castle and it's always fine for them to come back all lit up instead of telephoning from the state line to some relative or friend to come and meet them with a suit of clothes because they are in a barrel.

A Latrobe, Pa., doctor suggests that coasters wear helmets like football players, this advice is prompted on the account of twelve deaths of coasters. Something ought to be done to make it safer.

In the old days the measure of hospitality wasn't always liquid measure.

The Catalina Islands are about twenty miles from Los Angeles and are owned by Wrigleys. These people are offering a prize of forty thousand dollars to the person who can swim this distance today. One hundred and fifty three humans are in the race, sixteen of whom are women. The crowd of swimmers is so big they will scare the sharks way. We doubt if any of them will make it. We know it is quite a ride by boat and quite rough.

Charley Chaplin's wife is going to try to get all of his money. She seems to have the goods on him and no doubt will ruin the funny boy if he does not hand over all his plunder. It will not take much rough stuff to put him out of the public eye.

Smoking is said to make women have red noses and make mustaches grow on their lips. Some will smoke in spite of this. We never can feel right to see women smoking. It just seems they are too nice to do anything like that.

If you find your husbands dull, girls, don't worry—the good ones always are that.

A New York man says tipping should be abolished and he is going to try and have the legislature pass a law prohibiting it. A woman who has spent all her life as a waitress says men tip because they like to and women tip because they are forced to. There would be very little tipping if women had to do it. We have seen very few women who did not think tipping was an outrage.

There are a lot of that kind of fellows— the ones who offer to hold the lantern while the wife chops the wood.

In some parts of this country efforts are already being made to bar the Charley Chaplin films. Those movie birds can be awful popular one day and on the bum the next day. When they fall they go with a bang and most of them are just mutts at that.

Red Headed men are not employed as taxi drivers in New York because they are too swift and speedy. Having too much pep isn't always the best thing.

Our idea of a genius is a fellow who can make his wife think that a flivver is an automobile.

Quite a bit of Florida fruit was frozen on the trees by a cold snap a few days ago. This will boost the California fruits, or at least it will give an excuse for raising the price.

CONCENTRATION

Would you use your innate powers,
Forces of the brain and soul
Which can move obstructing mountains,
Help you to attain your goal,
Powers that can do, in reason,
What is vision you may see
And fulfill your high ambitions,
Make you what you want to be?

Then by means of concentration
Give to your subconscious mind
All the outlines of your problem,
Bid it the solution find.
'Twill absorb each thought suggested
By your conscious mind, and will Analyze, construct and give you
Power to achieve with skill,

As the rays of sunlight gathered
In the sunglass flames will yield,
So in mental concentration—
Thoughts not scattered far afield,
But well focused on your problem
Will search out and bring to light
All those things for which you're seeking,
Show you how to win your fight.

S. S. MYERS

The testimony in the Peaches Browning suit against her husband is said to be so scandalous that it has been decided to hear it in private. This will be a terrible blow to some birds who cannot hear testimony that is too tough. We do not know of anything that could happen that will disappoint a lot of people any more.

A Pittsburgh woman whose dog was killed by an automobile, was paid thirty dollars by the owner of the car. She had the dog's body embalmed and had a specially built coffin for it. She also had the remains kept in her home for two days and had them buried in a dog cemetery. We are surprised that she did not bury the cur in a human cemetery also.

Then and now. An irate father addressing his up-to-the-minute daughter: "When your mother was a girl she outdressed all the other girls in the neighborhood but it looks as if you are trying to outstrip them."

When a Pittsburgh peddlar tried to sell fifty four pounds of potatoes for a bushel instead of sixty pounds at Woodlawn, Pa., he was arrested and fined ten dollars. Some of those smooth city guys get the surprise of their crooked lives sometimes when they try their rough stuff in small towns.

Many a New Castleite who rules with a rod of iron downtown at the store or office, hasn't any more back bone than a rabbit when he gets home with the missus.

The confidence expressed by the leaders of business in this country that 1927 is to be another year of great prosperity must be very disapointing to the Democrats who want an issue.

On sundry occasions, I have run the names of towns and people in this column because of their remarkable length. One was the name of a Welsh town that had 36 letters. I thought this was the limit, but a friend who originally came from Wales, has me beaten to a frazzle. He submits the following so to name of a hamlet on the banks of the Menai Straits on the Island and in the county of Anglesea, North Wales, about four miles from the city of Bangon, North Wales:

Llamfairpwllgwyngllgogerychwyryndrobwll—Llantysiliogogoch.

I wouldn't advise you to be in any great hurry when it comes to pronouncing this one, but the friend pronounced it without a great deal of trouble. Welsh is spoken in the deep throat, with a peculiar accent. It is an accent that an English speaking person never masters, for Welshmen are born, not made.

Federal statistics show that $12,000,000 worth of dolls were manufactured in the United States in 1925. It is a joy to know that little girls are still little girls.

Mexico may find itself even more disturbed in politics by oil than the United States has been by alcohol.

The nation's greatest tax suit, involving more than $34,000,000 is now under way. It shows just about how much money Henry Ford and the Dodge Brothers are making by selling automobiles, and it sure is a plenty.

If any real effort is made to change our alphabet a lot of fellows will probably move to eliminate the I. O. U.'s.

The reason some men take a chance on robbing their country in peace is because their need is urgent and they can't wait for it to get into another war,

Gene Tunney the heavyweight champion is up in arms because a promoter has had the nerve to say he is afraid of a certain party. A champion is supposed to be the king of them all, but the way they dodge at times leads the ordinary laymen to believe that they are not quite sure of their ability.

The medicinal whisky problem might be solved by giving the bootlegger an M. D. not at all inappropriate. Distillers of Moonshine would seem just about to fit.

The easiest way to become fluent is to practice by talking to a flat tire.

Perhaps when we have television the telephone operators will know better than to give a man a ring just as he is getting into his bath.

If that so-called Spanish influenza ever reaches the proportion of the so-called Spanish dances that seem to be epidemic in this country, we're going to find ourselves in a bad way, a very bad way.

We have seen rhubarb in local stores that was shipped here in nice fancy boxes like those that contain the flowers the florists send out for the young fellow who wants to make a hit with his girl. That is a nice way to treat just an ordinary article like pie-plant that grows all over in the summer season.

John D. Rockefeller played golf in Florida the other day with ear muffs and gloves on. The strange part of it is that this story was sent out from Florida. Must have been a northern correspondent looking for news and not one of the Florida boys who send out the propaganda.

James C. Shanessy, president of the barbers of this country declares against tips for barbers on the thought that it tends to lower the dignity of the work. We always did think that the barbers got enough for their work without being tipped. And the head barber thinks

The Latest — Not Too Good.
A Coolidge Miracle.
Free Love Is Old.
Optimism and Work.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

The very latest from Mexico is not pleasant. Mexican mobs in Guadala fire shots into the air, indicating annoyance, when stopped in their march against the American consulate. Mexican students "will fight and die with Calles in his battle against the northern colossus." Uncle Sam is the colossus.

Ninety-nine are killed in Mexican rows.

The Russian lady envoy to Mexico indignantly denies the truth of President Coolidge's statement about bolshevik propaganda in Latin America. She says, "We are innocent."

The pope denies the charge by President Calles that Catholics have instigated rebellion in Mexico, and says Mexican Catholics have shown great self-restraint.

This country sends the fifth regiment of marines to concentrate at the Quantico naval base for "emergency" service. Two more fighting ships are sent to Nicaragua, and La Prensa, powerful Argentine paper, reflects Latin-American public opinion in calling President Coolidge's message "an imperialistic utterance."

Dispatches from Mexico City report business almost paralyzed, a serious crisis threatening the Mexican cabinet, and Mexico. Many say that the fate of President Calles is in the hands of President Coolidge. Others think a conflict between Mexico and the United States inevitable.

National Committeeman Clements of Missouri says: "Nothing short of a political miracle can stop President Coolidge's renomination and re-election in 1928." The only question is: Does President Coolidge want the nomination?

There is no third term question involved. Mr. Coolidge has been elected president only once. George Washington's idea was to prevent presidents using the power of patronage to force repeated nominations and elections. Nineteen hundred-twenty-eight would be President Coolidge's second elective term.

As for a miracle defeating President Coolidge, you can imagine even miracles that are impossible. No miracle could make a six-week-old calf in five minutes, for if made in five minutes it wouldn't be six weeks old.

The son of a Methodist bishop demands a divorce because his wife believes in a new, strange, abhorrent theory of "free love".

It is strange, it is abhorrent, but it is not new. Monkeys entertained that theory before there were any men on earth. And lower animals had it before monkeys came. That is part of the animal inheritance out of which men have been slowly climbing, pushed upward by the institution of marriage and the strong will of women.

Florida has chosen "optimism and work" as the state slogan, following the big wind and temporary land slump. It's an excellent slogan, especially if you put the heavy accent on "work".

Florida's future is assured as one of the great national sun parlors. Incidentally, at this moment, you can't, for love, money or pull, engage rooms for the season at the big Palm Beach hotels. Try it.

Another good slogan for Florida would be "give up railroad men like S. Davies Warfield." Transportation is to a state what blood is to the body.

Warfield, a born fighter, and successful in the face of vicious opposition, has forced new branches of his seaboard air line system north, south, east and west in Florida, carrying passengers direct from the north to Miami without change of cars.

A far-sighted railroad man is as valuable to a state as a great governor, and as scarce.

Yea, the sparrow has found a house, and the swallow a nest for herself."

It is reported that Count Salm, from Europe, who married a daughter of the Standard Oil, Miss Rogers, will withdraw all claims against the lady and her father for balm in the shape of $325,000.

Old Bible times are no more. Mrs. Potiphar walked away with a piece of Joseph's coat, Count Salm walks away with a piece of Standard Oil change. And the mother must allow him to see her dear little boy. Very touching scene in modern domesticity.

Every sweet has its sour; every evil its good," says Emerson.

The Scopes evolution trial in Tennessee made the United States scientifically ridiculous, the world's laughing stock. But it caused hundreds of thousands to read and think about evolution who had never done either before.

Now Professor Griggs, teacher of biology at Dartmouth, says the Scopes trial has greatly increased interest in natural science studies, causing expansion in the college courses on evolution, geology, astronomy and geography. The Scopes foolishness becomes an as-

In Day's News

According to gossip in London, the prospective retirement of the Marquis of Crewe from the post of British ambassador in Paris may result in diplomatic changes of interest on this side of the Atlantic. Rumor has it that Sir Eric Howard, the present ambassador to the United States, is likely to be transferred to Paris, while Sir Eric Drummond, well known as secretary of the League of Nations, is said to be slated for the post at Washington. Lord Crewe is now in his fifth year of service in Paris. He is one of the veterans in British public life, having begun his career more than 40 years ago as private secretary to Lord Granville, at that time the British foreign minister. Later, by way of the lord lieutenantship of Ireland and the office of lord privy seal, he rose in ministerial rank.

THERE IS NOTHING BETTER—

In times of danger than a serene faith in the goodness of the universe.
In times of weariness than the memory of some work well done.
In times of failure than the feeling that one has done his best.
In times of war than some friends to whom we have been generous in peace.
In times of political mud slinging than a clean record.
In times of controversy than a faith that is built on experience.
In times of discouragement than a sheltering home and a comforting friend.

STYLE

The reign of style is universal.

At a wedding the other day the bridesmaids were all tall, slim girls. There seems to be a style in the height of girls.

The style of women in Turkey runs more to embonpoint than the standard of beauty in the United States.

The style in Oriental countries of having several wives is challenged by the style in western countries of having but one, while in some countries the trend seems to be to have none at all.

We used to wear pointed shoes, pantalettes, high head-dresses, chignons, bustles and long skirts.

What would our grandmothers say to see the ladies nowadays wearing skirts that come only to the knees? Such dresses must appear positively indecent to those who are brought up upon the idea

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

NEW PROSPECTS OPEN.

Before the War, Germany dominated the world in the manufacture and sale of toys. Germany still makes toys, but the United States does not buy nearly as much of them as it used to. The manufacturers in America have discovered they can also make toys, and sell them, and the Department of Commerce has announced that in 1925 this Nation produced seventy-five million dollars worth of toys, which was more than twice the production of Germany. The official Bulletin of the Department goes on to say:

"The growth of the toy industry in the United States during the last two decades, in which time it rose from a relatively insignificant position to that of the world's leading toy producer, is now revealed. Twenty years ago Germany dominated the world's toy trade. Outside of the United States, this domination still exists, but in this country German toys now count for only about five per cent of the domestic demand, although in 1904 that proportion was not far from fifty per cent. In that year the value of toys made in American factories, was only $5,578,000, while imports were valued at approximately five million dollars. Last year American toy production reached a value of not far from eighty million dollars, while imports had fallen to a position where they represented only about five per cent. of this country's demand."

The report goes on to call attention to the fact that while American toy industry has established a remarkable record in the domestic import, it has been far from getting its proportionate share in export trade. Last year the total exports from this country, of toys, were valued at only a little more than three billion dollars, while during the same period Germany exported toys valued at nearly twenty seven million dollars.

This is fine as far as it goes, but it should go further. The outstanding characteristic of the American made toy is quality. Germany, while manufacturing many high grade toys, finds her prominence in the field of low price products. The American toy industry has reached a point equal to the domestic demand, therefore if its growth is to continue, it is essential that foreign outlets be developed.

It has been said many many times, that great prosperity follows great wars. The prosperity is generally found among the people of the victorious nation. In the last War, America was only one of the Nations on the side of the victors, and it is certainly a remarkable condition to find so much complaint existing in France, England, and Italy regarding the conditions of trade, and find such great prosperity in America.

Can it be possible that French, Italian, and English propagandists because of the great debt due the United States from this Nation, are belittling the prosperity which they themselves enjoy?

The Man Who Gets the Watch and Chain.

I've sat upon his left and I
Have sat upon his right,
I've heard him sob, I've heard him sigh
On many a banquet night
Oh, we're a sentimental crew,
The fact is very plain,
I'll prove it by the fellow who Receives the watch and chain.

He may appear a man severe,
But let the speech begin,
And you can see the falling tear,
And mark the trembling chin.
He tries to speak, but seldom can,
A fog obscures his brain,
I'm always sorry for the man
Who gets the watch and chain.

I've sat where I could hear his heart
In mortal anguish thump,
I've watched the grateful tear drops start,
I've seen that awful lump
Come rising in his throat and I
Have wondered at his pain,
Why must the fellow always cry
To get a watch and chain?

Man likes to pose as harsh and stern,
But underneath his vest
Most of us some day come to learn
He's easily distressed.
When he is honored by his clan
His tears will fall like rain
Grief always overcomes the man
Who gets the watch and chain.

POEMS-HOVE

BY CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

"FREEDOM AND LOVE"
By Thomas Campbell

Campbell lived from 1777 to 1844. He wrote many patriotic poems in praise of England, he was a true nature lover and his verse, though not very profound or great, has its definite place. Always the careful craftsman, he is worth dipping into, since his message, while perhaps not important, is always beautifully phrased. His love poems have warmth and gentleness.

How delicious is the winning
Of a kiss at love's beginning,
When two mutual hearts are sighing
For the knot there's no untying!

Yet remember, 'midst your wooing,
Love has bliss, but Love has ruing;
Other smiles may make you fickle,
Tears for other charms may trickle.
Love he comes, and love he tarries,
Just as fate or fancy carries;
Longest stays, when sorest chidden;
Laughs and flies, when pressed and bidden.

Bind the sea to slumber stilly,
Bind its odor to the lily,
Bind the aspen ne'er to quiver,
Then bind love to last forever.

Life's a fire that needs renewal
Of fresh beauty for its fuel:
Love's wing moults when caged and captured,
Only free, he soars enraptured.

Can you keep the bee from ranging
Or the ringdove's neck from changing?
No! nor fettered Love from dying
In the knot there's no untying.

Mexico Reports Rebel Outbreak Is Under Control

Rebels Attack Railroads Throughout Various Parts Of Country

FEDERALS HOPE TO SAVE DURANGO

(International News Service)

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 15.—With a general offensive against rebels in full swing in Durango, the Mexican government today maintained that the rebels fighting under the banners of religious zealots are now under control.

Durango offers the one remaining stronghold of the rebels, the war department reports show, and the offensive which has been launched by the federals is expected to be effective.

Attacks upon railroads continue throughout various parts of the country.

Mining companies in Guerro report that their operations have been handicapped by the rebels carrying off their supplies of explosives.

In Catholic quarters reports were received today that Bishop Diaz, former spokesman for the Catholic episcopate, who was arrested earlier in the week, has crossed the Guatemalan frontier, to which he was escorted by Mexican government agents.

that a perfect lady should have nothing at all between her ankles and her chin, at least nothing to speak of.

Bobbed hair is in style and cigarette smoking seems to be on the increase.

We all notice how queer our ancestors looked with their high stocks and other out-of-date clothing in old portraits. Styles of dress have changed since those times and they will probably change again in another generation.

But style is something deeper than mere appearance.

There is style of opinion. It was once the style to speak reverently of kings and of the church. Nowadays it is the style to poke fun at them more or less openly.

But the most curious thing of all is style in diseases. Once upon a time nobody ever heard of appendicitis. Now it is quite the thing to have your appendix removed, and certain doctors make a fortune by hacking out the superfluous appendix to your intestines.

People used to sport a lot of gold in their mouths. Nowadays fillings are less conspicuous.

People used simply to get tired. Now they have nervous breakdowns.

If you are going to be sick it behooves you to choose a fashionable malady. Don't have the old-fashioned stomach ache or sore toe, but look about for some new name for these commonplace diseases.

And if you are going to die don't select an old, worn-out complaint, but keep up with the procession. Get some new, fashionable trouble and pass away in good society.

There is no sense in dying like a horse or a cow from some common disease when you can die like a gentleman and a scholar by taking up with a new one.

Police To Store Cars Parked In Zones Too Long

Motorists who persist in parking their cars for extended periods of times on streets where parking is prohibited or limited will find their machines in storage and will not only be required to pay the regular fines but also storage charges.

An instance of this occurred yesterday when the car of E. P. Callanan which had been parked near the Mercer street entrance of the Leslie hotel for several days, was placed in a local garage by order of the police.

Mr. Callanan was assesed $3 in fines and also had to pay for having his machine hauled into a garage.

NOTED QUARTET WILL BE PRESENT

Edgar Thompson Male Quartet To Sing At Rev. Maitland's Anniversary

For his twenty-third spiritual anniversary, to be held on Tuesday, January 18, in the Greenwood church, Rev. Sam Maitland has a wonderful program outlined. His birthday parties are always interesting, but this year he has an added attraction in the form of the Edgar Thomson Male Quartette.

The quartette is the pride of the Edgar Thomson Steel Works in Braddock, Pa., and is made up of the following steel workers, Charles E. Price, first tenor; Evan H. Lloyd, second tenor; Clarence E. Drylie, baritone and Charles Loomis, bass, with Lewis Mason as accompanist.

The Edgar Thomson quartette was the first organization of its kind to span the Atlantic by radio. Broadcasting from KDKA they were heard in London, England, and an interesting sidelight of this test was that William Lloyd of Maestag, South Wales, heard his son's voice for the first time in 13 years.

Sydney, Australia and Johannesburg, South Africa, have also heard the quartette. While the quartette is composed of steel workers it ranks with the best male quartette in the state. It is fostered by O. J. H. Hartsuff, superintendent of the Edgar Thomson Works, a former New Castle man. He may be present at the meeting.

Apple Way Fire Causes $300 Loss

Attempt To Thaw Out Water Pipes Cause Of Blaze This Morning

Fire caused by an effort to thaw out frozen water pipes in the sink of the upstairs apartment of the Dr. C. A. Reed property, 26 Apple Way, about 11 o'clock today, resulted in a loss of probably $300.

The fire went up the partitions to the attic and damaged the walls and attic at that point. The firemen controlled the fire in a few minutes and without much damage to the house furnishings of Levi Holland, who occupies the apartment.

The fire was also prevented from going downstairs into the paint shop H. Eckelberger. Had it reached that section of the building, a more stubborn blaze would probably have been encountered.

ANNUAL DRIVE NOW UNDER WAY

Woman's Aid Of Pennsylvania Starts Campaign—Pennsy Railroad News Items

Annual drive for membership to the Woman's Aid of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company starts today, by which it is hoped that 100 per cent membership of all the employes of the company may be obtained.

The funds obtained by this drive are put in charge of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's Woman's Aid and is executed by the women who belong to families members of which are employed by the company.

The object of the Aid is to organize the women of the families connected with the railroad company in order that they may know each other and when occasion may require render aid and sympathy to employes and their families in such a manner as may be most helpful.

The cold wave with snow and ice which struck this territory, has not hindered the train service very much, although several trains were not able to make their schedules quite on time on account of the adverse conditions.

Labor Dispute At New Hotel Building

Building Trades Council Agent Calls Some Of Men Off Of Job

Laborers, electricians and engineers employed by the H. J. Conrath Company of Erie, Pa., in the construction of "The Castleton" hotel building on North Mercer street, were called out Friday afternoon by T. J. McMichael, Building Trades Council business agent, for an alleged use of non-union men in unloading a large boiler and placing it in the cellar. About 20 men were effected by the order to cease work.

Carpenters and plumbers employed on the job are still working and will continue to do so, according to Marcus J. Kintz, superintendent in charge. Laborers and others needed will be employed on an open shop basis to complete the work, according to Superintendent Kintz, who declares that the effort to cripple the work of the Conrath Company is decidedly unfair, as he alleged non-union work done was on a separate contract, that of the heating plant, and beyond the control of his company. The places of the men called off have been filled to some extent and work is going on as usual, according to Superintendent Kintz.

The Conrath Company has no quarrel with the bricklayers, carpenters and plumbers and will continue to operate on a union basis with that type of workmen, according to Superintendent Kintz.

The trouble was occasioned when workmen of the trucking company transporting the large boiler to the hotel building for the R. T. Withers Co., which has the heating contract, unloaded the boiler and started to take it to the basement, according to Superintendent Kintz. The iron workers objected to these men unloading and placing the boiler in the basement of the building, claiming it was their work and that the men employed were non-union.

When our work on earth is done.
In loving memory of our little daughter, Anna Louise Cox. Sadly missed by daddy and mother.

International Sunday School Lesson

Notes On Lesson By

George M. Landis, Pastor First Baptist Church, New Castle

PRAYER IN THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

Mk. 1:35; 14:32-36; Mat. 6:9-13. Golden Text: "Ask, and it shall be given you: seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."—(Mat. 7:7).

Prayer is the greatest privilege which the Christian enjoys in this world. The idea of prayer, as the Bible presents that doctrine, is entirely foreign to heathen religions. They may sacrifice to their idols but they have no sense of fellowship with their deities. Instead, the pagan is moved with a sense of fear and dread, regarding his god as a despotic autocrat who must be placated by sacrifice and offerings. His object is rather to keep out of the slight and reach of his god than to come into fellowship with it. Fellowship with God is a distinctive chacateristic of Christianity. One of the weaknesses of the church in this day, is that too many of its members do not avail themselves of the marvelous privilege of fellowshipping with the infinite God thru prayer. Consequently the sense of His presence, nearness, and favor is lost and the life is impoverished.

The Lord Jesus Christ the greatest teacher on the subject of prayer. He taught His disciples to pray by precept and example. In the first two passages for today's study, we have the Lord's example in prayer. In the third passage we have the Lord's directions in answer to the disciples' plea, "Lord, teach us to pray" (Lk. 11:1). Every Christian would do well to sit at the feet of Jesus in His school of prayer. Concerning prayer in the Christian's life we note:

I. THE HABIT OF PRAYER.

From the Scriptures given, together with many others, we find that prayer was a habit in the life of every follower of Jesus. By habit we do not mean that prayer should become a formal and mechanical activity of the soul; but definite habits in prayer will tend to develop the prayer life. This habit may be best formed by setting aside a definite

II. TIME FOR PRAYER.

Our Lord rose up early in the morning to pray. Again he spent the evening and occasionally a whole night in prayer. It is altogether likely that He began and ended each day in prayer. We will never find time for prayer unless we make time for it. No hour is better than the first hour of the day. How refreshed would our souls be, if the early hours of every day were moistened with the dew of heaven. A habit should not develope into bondage, but practically all the great men and women of prayer, have been systematic in their praying.

III. OCCASIONS FOR PRAYER.

There are many occasions for prayer arising every day. As we study the prayer life of our Lord, we find that He prayed: in the time of physical and mental weariness (Mk. 1:35); in the moments of great popularity (Lk. 5:15-16; Jn. 6:15); in the hours of choice and decision (Lk. 6:12-13); in times when He was misunderstood (Lk. 9: 18-20); in connection with His periods of teaching (Lk. 11: 1-3); before working a miracle (John 11:33, 41-42); in connection with the lesser events of His life (Jn. 6:11; Lk. 24:30); in connection with all the important events and crises of His life as: His baptism (Lk. 3:21-22), transfiguration (Lk. 9:28-36), before the crucifixion (Mk. 14:32-36), while on the cross (Lk. 23:34, 46; 27:46-47) on His return to the Father (Jn. 14:16). At the present hour, as our Great High Priest and Advocate, He is offering up constant intercession for His own (John 17; Lk. 22:32; Heb. 7:25.)

So with us, every event of life, be it great or small; is an occasion for prayer. We should take no steps without knowing that we are in the will of God. What many misteps would be saved and tragedies averted, if Christians would really live the life of prayer.

IV. MODEL PRAYERS.

The two prayers given in our lesson may be studied as examples of the proper attitude and spirit of prayer. Those who pray in the Spirit, will conform to the spirit revealed in these prayers. True prayer must:—

1. Be based on relationship—"Our Father." God is the Father of those who believe on the Lord Jesus Christ (Gal. 3:26.)
2. Reverent—"Hallowed by Thy name." The Bible does not warrant a light, flippant prayer.
3. Missionary—"Thy kingdom come." God's name and work and will are uppermost in the true Christian's mind.
4. Submissive—"Thy will be done," (Mk. 14:36). Our own self-will is the greatest obstacle to prayer.
5. Daily—"Give us this day."
6. Trustful—"Our daily bread."
7. Definite—"Bread." Too often we fail because our prayers are so indefinite that they do not manifest a genuine interest.
8. Forgiving — "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." (Eph. 4:32).
9. Holy—"Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." Sin is the great hinderance to successful prayer. (James 4:3).
10. Adoring—"For Thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory."

What a sin it is for us to reject God's gracious invitation to come into His presence in prayer, there to enjoy His fellowship. Would we be so discourteous to the invitation of an earthly monarch? Then why do we treat with contemptuous indifference the invitation to speak with the King of Kings?

Will Tell Grand Jury How Ballot Box Disappeared

Authorities Still Hunt For Ballot Box Missing Since Election

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 15.—Jerry Sullivan, election judge of the Pittsburgh district in which the ballot box used in the recent general election here was found to be missing when it was ordered seized for examination by a special grand jury here investigating alleged frauds in Allegheny county, will appear before the jury Monday to be questioned regarding the loss, it was learned today.

District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner, at whose instance the investigation is being carried on, announced that charges of irregularities in the election, upon which scores of witnesses have been examined, hinged upon a number of ballot boxes, of which the missing box was one.

Meantime, county detectives continued their search for the box, and served additional subpoenas upon persons who are to appear for questioning by the grand jury Monday.

Mention Reason Cobb-Speaker Were Released

(International News Service)

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 15.—Although Tris Speaker referred all interviewers to his attorney, William H. Boyd, and the latter said "it's all news to me," local baseball fans seized on the report from Detroit that Speaker and Cobb had been fired from baseball for flirting with a third league as being more than gossip.

During the period between the end of the last season and Speaker's retirement, the point out, local newspapers carried many hints of the possibilities of the third circuit. Speakers' name was mentioned prominently in connection with these reports.

Evangelist Uses Illustrations In Presenting Message

Sunday School Night Is Observed At First Baptist Church Friday Evening

Last night was Sunday School night at the evangelistic services being conducted by Mel Morris at the First Baptist church. The gospel was presented by Mr. Morris with crayon drawings and charts. For an hour he held the attention of the audience with his skillful use of colored crayons. The way of life and the way of death: the straight and narrow way, and the broad way were vividly presented and in a manner not soon to be forgotten. The artist closed his message with an earnest appeal to the boys and girls as well as the men and women to accept Jesus Christ as the savior. A number responded.

Special musical numbers were a violin solo by Burdette Callahan accompanied by his mother, Mrs. J. S. Callahan; and a vocal solo by John McClelland, a nine-year-old boy, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. D. C. McClelland. First prize, a Bible, was given to the class taught by Mrs. R. S. Houk for the largest percentage of members present.

There will be no service tonight. Sunday morning Evangelist Morris will speak on "Divine and Human Workmanship."

"Samson in the Devil's Barber Shop" will be Mr. Morris' theme at the Sunday afternoon meeting at 3 o'clock. All the Men's Bible Classes of the city have been invited to this service thru their pastors. If for any reason their invitation has not reached them, they are urged to attend. The main floor of the auditorium will be reserved for the men's classes. Ladies and other visitors may occupy the galleries. Special musical numbers will be given.

Believe Jealousy Shooting Cause

Wealthy New York Man Is Mysteriously Attacked In His Apartment

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—The strangling of Louise Lawson, a girl singer, was recalled today by the mysterious shooting last night of Ignatz Salz, 48, fountain pen manufacturer, in a West Side apartment house where the Texas girl was murdered two years ago.

Salz, who was awaiting the arrival of a girl at his bachelor apartment, was shot at the door by one of two men when he answered their ring. The bullet lodged in the abdomen. He was taken to a hospital, where it was said today Salz probably would recover.

An attractive blonde, who called at Salz's apartment shortly after the shooting occurred, fainted when told Salz had been shot. She said she had a dinner engagement with Salz. The girl refused to give her name, but told police she was married. After questioning her for several hours detectives said they did not believe she had any knowledge of the crime.

Police believed that the two men shot Salz because of jealousy over a woman. They dismissed a robbery motive when jewelry and $4,000 was found in Salz's clothes.

Salz could give police only a vague description of his assailants, who escaped without attracting attention. He said that just before he was wounded one of the men shouted, "give it to him".

Salz was well known as a patron of night clubs.

Whipping Post In Pennsylvania

Suggestion Is Made For Introduction Of Punishment In State

NEWS NOTES FROM STATE CAPITOL

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 15.—Establishment of whipping posts in Pennsylvania similar to those in Delaware may be a possibility of the future, if an informal discussion of several members of the Pennsylvania legislature should result in the introduction and passage of a whipping post bill. It was while several legislators from the rural districts were standing in the lobby of the house discussing proposed legislation that the whipping post was mentioned for insertion in the criminal code which is due to carry many amendments this year. The discussion opened with an onslaught against intoxicated automobile operators and the suggestion was made that the whipping post would do as much to break up the practice as any of the sentences now inflicted by the courts. The suggestion, which met with favor, may materialize.

The desks of the late Senator Marvin E. Griswold of Erie and William J. McNichol of Philadelphia in the senate chamber here are draped in black and on each stands a basket of flowers. Strangely enough, both desks are in the same row running across the chamber and they are but three desks apart. Senator Griswold's desk is third from the north side of the chamber while the desk of Senator McNichol is fourth from the south side. McNichol died in Atlantic City several weeks ago and Senator Griswold died at his home in Erie the day before the opening of the present legislative session, January 3.

As the real legislative labors of the 127th session in Pennsylvania nears more and more talk is heard of the prominent part the women of the state will play in legislative channels during the next three months. Among the things which the women will sponsor are the reformation of the tax collection and real estate assesment systems; tightening of election laws; unmolested prohibitory laws; increases in appropriations the mothers' assistance fund.

Congress In A Hodge Podge, Speaking Of Party Alignment

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to New Castle News.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Politically the senate has been a hodge podge for a long time. Democrats have voted with Republicans. Republicans with Democrats. Party lines have meant next to nothing.

In the house of representatives it's been possible to guess with some certainty who was who.

Now the two parties have been shuffled in the lower house, too, until it's impossible to tell 'em apart.

* * *

What is a Republican these times, anyway? What's a Democrat?

Well, it seems fair to call Calvin Coolidge a sample Republican. He was elected president as one.

So suppose we assume that a man who supports Coolidge's policies is a Republican; that a man who fights them is a Democrat.

What, then, are you going to say of 76 Republican representatives who cast anti-Coolidge votes the other day? What are you going to say of 58 Democrats who voted on Coolidge's side?

About all you can say is that you're all mixed up.

* * *

It was on the navy bill.

President Coolidge favored a bill authorizing 10 new cruisers. So far so good. There was no particular kick on that.

But congress can "authorize" cruisers until it's black in the face and it means no new ships unless money's appropriated, too, to build them.

The "big navy" folk said: "Besides this authorization, we want cash, actually to build three boats."

"No," said President Coolidge. "The authorization's enough."

* * *

At this the "big navy" crowd bucked.

Representative John Q. Tilson of Connecticut introduced an amendment to the "authorization" bill. Its purpose was to provide money for a start on those three cruisers.

Bear this in mind:

Tilson is Republican leader in the house of representatives. When a Republican boss like Tilson defies a Republican president it's some sensation.

* * *

Tilson's amendment was beaten. The president won.

But the president ought to have won, if he'd had his party's full support, with everybody else against him, by a margin of 50-odd votes. As a matter of fact, he won by only two.

He'd have lost but for Democratic help.

Herein lies another sensation. Representative Finis J. Garrett of Tennessee, Democratic leader, tried to show his strength to Tilson. If he could have done it Tilson, not the president, would have won. But about a third of the Democrats refused to follow him and saved the Republican president.

* * *

Thus the result was:

1. A kick in the slats for the president, for winning by only two votes instead of half a hundred or more and for having such big men in his party as Tilson and Speaker Longworth opposing him.

2. A sock in the eye for Tilson, for being able, as Republican leader, to line up only 76 out of his nominal force of 247 representatives.

3. A poke on the nose for Garrett, for being shown up as a Democratic leader with about as unreliable a following as Tilson's, on the Republican side.

As for party alignments, they're mussed up now for fair.

CREDIT lightens the road to a better furnished home. As a matter of fact, most homes are furnished on credit, why not yours? Movie "Kisses" In Controversy

Noted Scenarist Comes To Front With Attack On Movie Love Scenes

RUSSIAN BOOTS SMART STYLES

By MILLER HOLLAND
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 15.—When Mrs. Grundy starts agitating against the 20-foot moving picture kiss, the sort of a kiss that holds the sighing flapper in rapt ecstacy, nobody takes the dear old lady very seriously.

"Let her rave," is about all the response she is ever able to get.

It's different, however, when Garrett Fort, DeMille scenarist, comes out with a statement against the "slow motion" kiss.

And Fort has done just that. And everybody listens attentively.

"The 20-foot kiss," he declares, "has resulted in an over-emphasis of screen love-making that must undergo a change if pictures are to become a true reflection of life."

Intermittent clinches that punctuate every other scene have kept motion pictures on a plane of unreality, Fort believes.

"It has tended to reflect life only in its stages of tense excitement and high pressure," the DeMille scenarist says. "The love theme has always been exaggerated to a degree that sometimes makes the picture ridiculous.

"The scenario writer and director must subdue this tendency to have the hero and heroine fall into a clinch every time the picture threatens to lose interest or the motivation becomes slow," Fort declares.

The motion picture public has become satiated with the saccharine trend and the love theme must be made relative to other elements.

To be strictly smart in Hollywood this season film stars must wear Russian boots.

The rage was started by Maria Corda, Hungarian beauty recently imported by First National to make pictures in the Amreican film colony. She comes from a successful career with UFA in Berlin.

Mlle. Corda and her equally well known director husband, Alexander Korda, who spells his name with a "K" and has also come to Hollywood with First National, are quite the rage socially in the film colony.

Just to clinch this style of edict of booterie, Pola Negri appeared at approximately the same time with Russian boots.

A half dozen pairs, ranging from grey kid to brighter colors, trimmed in colors to match, were importer by Mlle. Corda and now the fashionable shops of Hollywood can't produce the soft creations of Russian leather fast enough.

Mlle. Corda is thrilled with Hollywood—and a little bit frightened, too, she confesses.

"Hollywood is wonderful—like a touch of Paris in America," she says. "But competition, it is keen. I have almost what you say, cold feet?—for it is like discovering a new world after thousands of beauties have discovered it already."

On the subject as to whether men or women are the easiest to direct, screen directors are about evenly divided.

The consensus of opinion seems to be that women are the most natural actors but that the men are more pliable and certainly the easiest to direct where speed and energy are required.

Women, being actresses off the stage, as well as on, fall into a character role quicker than men do but at the same time they are more limited as to their interpretative gestures.

King Vidor, who has directed pictures for years, declares he has no preference as to which sex he would rather direct. "I find that it is the individual, and not the sex," says Vidor. "If the story gives both the man and woman an equal opportunity and both are accomplished artists, one will be as pliable to direction as the other."

Hobart Henley, who has directed most of the stars on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, believes women have a shade the best of the argument. "Fully as easy to take direction, if not easier," is the way he describes it. "It may be that I have had exceptionally good actresses in my pictures but I truly believe I would rather attempt a difficult scene with a woman to direct than a man.

"The average woman will pay more attention to what the director says and will throw herself into character more quickly than a man."

W. S. Van Dyke sides with the men. "Most of my pictures," says Van Dyke, "require action and lots of it. Naturally men are more energetic than women, which, of course, has a good deal of bearing in scenes where swiftly moving action is required."

Lawrence County Petitions Are Given To U. S. Congress

Petitions Urging Action On Civil War Pensions Presented By Phillips

By GEORGE H. MANNING
(Washington Correspondent of The New Castle News)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 15.—Several petitions signed by groups of residents in Pittsfield, Warren county, Sandy Lake, Mercer county, and by citizens of Lawrence and Butler counties, Pa., urging the passage of pending Civil War pension legislation, were placed before the House of Representatives yesterday by Congressman Thomas W. Phillips Jr., of Butler, and Harris J. Bixler of Johnsonburg.

These petitions urged Congress to "take immediate steps to bring to a vote a Civil War pension bill that further relief may be accorded to needy and suffering veterans and their widows."

Early passage was asked of the bill recently reported to the House by Congressman Swoope of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House committee on invalid pensions, which would provide increases of pensions from $30 to $50 a month for every widow who was married to a veteran of the Civil War prior to June 27, 1905.

The act of July 3, 1926, granted $50 a month to widows of Civil War veterans who had been the wives of such soldiers, sailors or marines during the period of their service during the Civil War. More than 21,000 widows have received pension increases under this act, but it is declared that the widows who were married after the war, raised the families of the soldiers and nursed them through life were just as deserving as the ones who were pensioned under the act of July 3, 1926, and it is for the benefit of these that the pending bill is being urged.

Another pension bill, introduced by Congressman Elliott of Indiana, who also introduced the widows' general increase bill, would provide increases of pension for pensioners who lost a hand or foot, arm or leg, in line of duty.

The petitions placed before the House by Congressman Phillips and Bixler have been referred to the House committee on invalid pensions.

Over 500 Pardons Given During Pinchot Regime

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 15. — Although 529 pardons were granted during the Pinchot administration, the percentage of applications granted was far below that of either of the two previous administrations, Francis H. Hoy, secretary of the State Board of Pardons, said today in making public the records for the four years.

Secretary Hoy has completed compilation of the records with the per centages of various angels covering the activity of the board.

During the administration forty-five men were electrocuted and the death sentence of twenty-seven men commutted. One man under death sentence died in prison before the electrocution could be carried out.

The high point in executions was reached during the Sproul administration when seventy-one men were electrocuted. There were but seventeen commutations during that period.

During the Brumbaugh administration there were forty-nine electrocutions and nine death sentences commuted.

In the four years of the Pinchot administration there were 2,039 applications for pardons before the board. Of that number, 529, or 25.9 per cent were granted.

Under the Sproul regime there were 1,284 applications for pardons of which 382, or 29.7 per cent were granted. The percentage under Governor Brumbaugh was 46.5.

The number of paroles issued by each of the three governors showed little difference. Under Pinchot there were 2,630 paroles granted, under Sproul 2,668, and under Brumbaugh 2,687.

Of the 529 pardons granted by the Pinchot administration, 261 were based on the recommendation of the trial judges and district attorneys. There were 197 granted either upon merit or to remove the stigma of a jail term and to restore the prisoner to citizenship. The remaining seventy-one pardons were granted upon the recommendation of the jury, prison officials, state, county and city officials, prosecutors, and the Veterans Bureau of the federal government.

The officers installed included the following: president, William Clappie; vice president, Mrs. Anna Sturdy; secretary, Mrs. Marie Wheale; treasurer, Mrs. Stella Black; historian, Mrs. Sarah Smith; chaplain, Mrs. Robert Russell; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Edward Fulkerson.

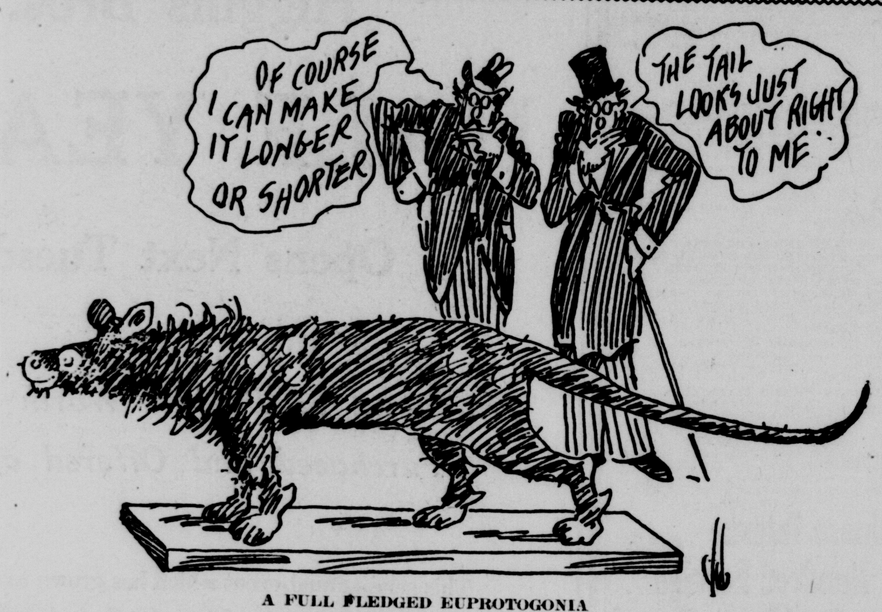

During the social hour which followed the business session a shower of beautiful handkerchiefs was presented to Mrs. H. A. Sturdy, who is leaving this evening for Concord, Cal., where she will spend three months with her son.

The meeting closed with singing the song, "Pennsylvania", composed by Mrs. Rohrer.

ABE MARTIN On Science

A FULL FLEDGED EUPROTOGONIA

Science is allus a foundin' us. Even if life held not, 'n' 'cept an occasional scientific discovery it would be well worth livin'. We soon tire o' social an' political events, calamities, divorces, athletic achievements, sensational books, an' all th' things that are supposed t' make life allurin', but a new, great scientific discovery allus thrills us, whether it's a missin' toe o' th' dinosaurus, or a knee joint o' th' great auk. Recently a fossil tooth greatly resemblin' a human tooth wuz found in Montana. Th' geologic formation in which th' tooth wuz found belong t' th' Eocene period. Dr. Mopps says this formation wuz deposited some 75,000,000 years befor th' Kerocene period, so if this tooth turns out t' be human, Montana 'll be th' oldest state in th' Union, as no other human relic o' such great age has been found anywhere. "If this tooth turns out t' be human," says Dr. Mopps, "our whole theory as regards th' beginnin' o' mankind 'll have t' be overhauled an' brought up t' date. If, by any hook or crook, science kin make a human tooth out o' this important fossil it won't be long till we have a 'Daughters o' Montanner' organization. Th' tooth is identified as a low, left, second molar, th' middle o' th' molars o' th' standardized human jaw. One thing that makes me think ther's a possibility o' it's bein' an integral part o' th' human skull is that it's almost th' same size as a human left, center molar. Besides, four cusps project from th' crown. This peculiarity, I'm told, is sometimes found in th' extreme right, back molar o' full-grown giraffes, but in th' jaws o' no other animals. O' course this raises th' question as t' whether giraffes ever fooled around Montanner. I hope th' identity o' this most interestin' molar is cleared up before th' country is flooded with scientific opinions. That'll kill th' tooth. It would be presumption, o' course, fer me t' state positively that this Montana relic is human," Dr. Mopps says further, "but from what I've read, I'm inclined t' think ther's a possibility, mind you, I say possibility, that this Montanner fossil o' th' Eocene period could belong t' th' Euprotogonia. This animal had quite a career in Montanner 61,000,000 years ago, an' is th' accredited ancestor o' our modern pig. I don't recall jest now who run this matter down. I don't know who found 'em or where they are t'day, but it is said that ther's several full sets o' Euprotogonia teeth in this country, an' ther strikingly human lookin'. A side elevation o' th' Euprotogonia is herewith reproduced from memory. Anyhow, this Montanner fossil gives us somethin' t' think about an' look forward to, 'cept th' next murder, or th' next Democratic national convention, or next spring. Meanwhile geologists, an' others with heavy, shell-rimmed glasses an' bulgin' foreheads are suspendin' judgment. Even if this Montanner relic proves t' be non-human it'll awaken new interest in th' Euprotogonia, an' new interest in anything that's decent is much t' be desired in these degenerate days."

Charlie Declares He Will Continue His Movie Work

Comedian Also Announces His Intention To Fight Wife's Divorce Suit

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Charlie Chaplin had recovered sufficiently today from the sudden and unpleasant publicity thrust on him by his wife's divorce suit to say he would seek refuge in work.

He will complete "The Circus", he explained, adding:

"I have only given up that work temporarily—until all this mess is cleared up.

"It will be my endeavor to keep on working all my life. Art and affection are essential parts of every man's life. The combination of the two is what makes life, especially since art is often inspired by love."

The saddened comedian continued today his conferences with his attorney, Nathan Burkan. Plans to combat Lita Grey Chaplin's suit and to file counter charges are under discussion.

Chaplin's attorney also is handling his suit to enjoin the Pictorial Review from continuing publication of a biography of the film comedian. Federal Judge Thatcher has reserved decision on an application for a temporary restraining order.

Chaplin expects to remain in New York for at least two weeks.

ARE WE LESS SENTIMENTAL

Do you remember how you used to look forward to Valentine Day when you were a child? Do you think children are any the less eager now? Apparently not. Valentines are in greater demand at the present time than ever before. More are being sold every year. The world isn't losing any of its sentimental side. We react to expressions of love and affection just the same as we always did. And as long as we do we need have no fears. Valentine's Day is good for us all.

TROOP 17

Troop 17 of the First Presbyterian church held its regular meeting Friday evening in the church. Those present were Scoutmaster Shultz, Assistant Scoutmaster Gray 16 scouts, one troop committeeman and several visitors.

The Flying Eagle patrol won the first place in various contests, the second place being taken by the Fox patrol. Ferris Hartley led in the scout yells and in songs.

However, the big event of the evening was one which all of the boys enjoyed. This was a talk by E. J. Davis, who spoke on "Alaska". Gold prospecting in Alaska and Alaskan dogs were the chief topics and as Mr. Davis has spent four years in Alaska his reports were enjoyed more because of their authenticity and because Mr. Davis was able to make the boys see and feel the interest of this country as he himself had seen it.

TROOP 15

Troop 15 of the First Christian church held its weekly meeting last evening in the basement of the church. Scoutmaster Sidney Smith and Assistant Scoutmaster Joseph Lindsay presided over the 24 scouts present. Two visitors, Roy Patton and Jack Smith, have decided to become scouts.

Jack Jones and Richard Bricker, who have been training under the direction of George McCracken, have now passed their signaling test. Demonstrations in lariat throwing and fire by friction were put on at this meeting.

Plans were made for a Valentine party to be held the second week in February. Every scout is to attend with a friend. Plans were also made for scout anniversary week. On Sunday all members are to attend church in a body.

This week Ben Nessle, senior patrol leader, and George McCracken, junior assistant scoutmaster, took a hike up the north side of the Neshannock to East Brook then to Lakewood and through East Brook to New Castle. The idea was to lay out a course for a hike to be taken by the troop in the near future.

This troop will also be represented at the coming Court of Honor to be held February 1. The next meeting will be held Thursday, January 20.

Troop scribe, George McCracken.

BEAUTIFUL OLD CUSTOM

There has been a tremendous revival of the custom of sending Valentines in the past few years.

A generation ago these tokens of affection were exchanged mostly between young people who were at the age of courtship

Nowadays nearly everybody sends them, all the way from little children to great-grandparents and there are really beautiful Valenines especially designed for almost every age and every degree of relationship and friendship.

It is a beautiful custom—and it saves writing a letter.

Temperature Below Normal In Eastern United States During Year Just Passed

Weather conditions for the year 1926 differed in general from that of no other year, says the Weather Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture, although in the states east of the Mississippi the temperature was below normal and in some parts the rainfall was above normal.

Yet in spite of the local conditions of low temperature and heavy rain fall that we experienced in this part of the country approximately two-thirds of the country had a year warmer than normal and a little more than half of the country had less than the normal rainfall for the year.

The growing season between the last killing frost of the spring and the first killing frost of the fall was somewhat longer in about 60 per cent of the country.

Absence of damaging frosts in the spring was responsible for one of the largest fruit yields in the history of the country and the widespread favorable weather in the South gave an unprecedented large cotton crop.

The mild winter and subsequent favorable weather last year resulted in an unusually good crop of winter wheat, but conditions were less favorable for corn, while heat and drouth materially reduced the yield of spring wheat.

In general, the weather fluctuations of 1926 differed in no important particular from normals established by more than 50 years of record, with the tendency to slightly warmer conditions than usual.

In most of the country the growing season was slightly warmer than the customary season. Such variations from the established normals are expected by meteorologists, and many years, since the Weather Bureau records began, could be selected showing greater variations than were observed in 1926.

Drum Corps Will Head Parade At State Capital

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 15.—The bugle and drum corps of Frankford post No. 211, American Legion, will lead the parade at the inauguration of John S. Fisher as governor of Pennsylania at Harrisburg January 18, according to an announcement made here today by William C. Tyson, commander of the Frankford post.

The corps, composed of about 60 men, has been the champion bugle and drum corps in the state and at the national convention of the legion here last fall copped additional prizes.

A number of the members of the Frankford post plan to make the trip to Harrisburg to see their "buddies" perform, it was said.

Hard Coal Men In Soft Coal Area

(International News Service)

HAZLETON, Pa., Jan. 15.—Despite optimistic statements from government officials at Washington that there is little danger of a soft coal strike April 1 hard coal operators here whose companies also control bituminous operations, today made no effort to conceal their belief that a soft coal strike is in the offing. The tie up will come, they believe when the present agreement expires on the night of March 31.

Claiming to be in a position to know how the soft coal operators feel toward the agreement local operators declared that the strike is inevitable. The miners convention at Indianapolis, Ind., late this month will determine what the union will ask and after the scale is acted upon the conferences between miners and operators will start.

Many hard coal operators have soft coal interests and a blow to one pocket is a boost to the other; a scarcity of bituminous coal means a demand for anthracite; the reverse of the situation was seen during the hard coal strike in 1925.

PROPOSED LAWS WOULD EFFECT STATE HUNTING

By HARRY BLOOMBARGH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 15.—The "hunting grounds" in Pennsylvania, one of the greatest states in the union for nimrods, will be a thing of the past, if certain laws which will be proposed to the present state assembly are passed.

This was the declaration made here today by John R. Truman, executive secretary of the state game commission.

Truman said that one of the laws asked would make it practically impossible to obtain an automatic revolver. A permit will be required, if the law is passed, for anyone wishing to purchase a sidearm of any kind.

An effort will be made, Truman added, to merge the fish and game commissions of the state. Truman, who said that the fish commission has only $200,000 with which to work, while the game commission has $700,000 available, urged those interested in game organizations and their purposes to oppose the law. He intimated that it requires much more money to protect game than it does to protect fish.

An attempt also may be made, according to the secretary to turn the game commission money into the general treasury of the state, which would make funds for stocking animals and fish dependent upon the generosity of the legislature.

It is growing more difficult each year to obtain animals for stocking preserves, he declared, and predicted that the time is not far distant when Pennsylvania will be forced to raise her own game for stocking purposes.

The only means of eliminating weasels and other noxious animals may be done away with, if the legislature passes a law to abolish the use of steel traps, Truman asserted.

Only one-tenth of one per cent of the licensed hunters in Pennsylvania have violated game laws of the state during the past four years, it was said, and at least half of these violations were accidental.

Concluding, Truman declared that the hunters of the Keystone state are the best sportsmen in the world.

Record Influx Of Visitors Foreseen At State Capital

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 15.—The capital city will be overflown with visitors next week—inauguration of John S. Fisher as governor of the commonwealth and the State Farm Products show.

However everyone will be furnished with suitable lodging accomodations despite the fact that regular hotel facilities will be taxed to capacity and most hostelries already have refused many requests for reservations for the week of January 17 according to an announcement made today by the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce.

The local Chamber of Commerce maintains a housing bureau through which all visitors unable to obtain rooms in hotels will be provided with lodgings in private homes. Scores of Harrisburgers have listed rooms with the housing buerau. No charges will be made by the bureau in locating lodging for the visitors.

It is urged by those in charge of the housing bureau that persons desiring rooms for one night or for the entire week would write the local Chamber of Commerce, giving the names and number of those in the party, time of arrival and legth of stay.

By utilizing the housing bureau service P. B. Rice, president of the local Chamber of Commerce, declared that adequate lodging accommodations can be obtained for the large number of visitors who will be here next week.

A thousand persons were struck by bicycles in London in a recent month. These newfangled contraptions are making the streets unsafe.

Army Development Sadly Hampered

Assistant Secretary Of War Discusses Condition With Newspaper Editors

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—America's regular army, which was to have formed a nucleus for a great military defense organization in the event of war, has virtually been rendered unfit for service in the field, Assistant Secretary of War MacNider asserted Friday in addressing the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Cutting down of army appropriations by congress was blamed for this state of military unpreparedness.

MacNider declared the passage of the national defense act had raised high hopes throughout the country that the United States at last was to have an army which would at all times be prepared for defense, but "through the seven years that have followed we have sat calmly by and let it be whittled away until there is danger that it (the national defense scheme) will provide neither a well-balanced army nor an effective one."

"The army," he said, "has been forced to abandon constructive projects already under way. It has watched the skeletonizing of its units until they are unfit either for the field, for their own training or for the instruction of the civilian components.

"If the present law cannot be carried out, we should be given a new one. A permanent balanced policy should not be too much to ask."

MacNider made no direct reference to the present critical situations in this country's international relations, either of which might lead to armed conflict, but he viewed the universal peace as a remote possibility.

"All thoughtful men and women," he said, "look forward to the day when war can be outlawed, but a glance at the foreign bulletins in any daily paper will shatter any such immediate hopes."

Pay In Checks Instead Of Cash

(International News Service)

BEAVER BROOK, Pa., Jan. 15.—Fear of the payroll bandit caused officials of the C. M. Dodson Coal company here today to abandon a practice three-quarters of a century old.

Checks were handed out to the miners today instead of cash which has been the customary pay of the company for 75 years. The miners were not over-joyed by the appearance of checks instead of cash because it is three miles to McAdoo and five miles to Hazleton where the nearest banks are located.

The company's payroll is close to $100,000 which woud make a nice haul for bandits, company officials pointed out. The check although a little inconvenient for the workmen is safe officials said.

SHORT ROMANCES OF EVERYDAY LIFE

A Modern Romeo

By Clyde Weldon

MARY, in an old sweater, and a felt hat pulled firmly down over her waving hair, was raking up the leaves on her front lawn. It was rather a hopeless task, for, just as she got them in a neat pile, a great gust of wind swept them helter-skelter across the lawn.

"Botheration!" cried Mary, and threw down her rake.

There was an amused chuckle and Mary looked up to see her neighbor, Rodney Blake, strolling across his yard, with a gun over his shoulder and a string of squirrels swinging from it. He was a big, blond fellow who wore his khaki hunting suit with an easy, slouching air.

Mary ran over to the fence and pointed an accusing finger at him. "You've been hunting all day long, when you ought to have been working," she reproved him.

Rodney's only answer was to drop his load and then leisurely light his pipe.

Mary continued: "Mrs. West came over for you. She can't make her vacuum-cleaner work; and Mrs. Johnson said you promised a week ago to put in a new battery for her front door bell. Right after dinner, I saw Mrs. Swanson go up your front walk. Rodney, have you wired those old lanterns for her porch?"

"Not yet," said Rodney, puffing contentedly on his pipe.

"You make me tired!" Mary spit out so suddenly that Rodney gave an involuntary start. "You're so lazy and slow! I just wish another electrician would come to town and cut you out."

Rodney removed the pipe from his mouth to give Mary his most tender, teasing look.

"Mary, dear, you sound so housewifely. I feel just like a hen-pecked husband," he said.

Mary tossed her head. "I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on earth. I detest laziness."

"What sort of man would you like to marry?" asked Rodney, knocking the ashes from his pipe.

"A good looking man who has a car, and a good job that he sticks to, and who makes love divinely," answered Mary, promptly.

"A sort of modern Romeo," interpreted Rodney, "who dashes up in a sport roadster, spends all his money, and then disappears until next week's wage is paid. I think I could fill the ticket—if I tried."

"Don't exert yourself," replied Mary, drily. "You might get heart failure."

Rodney carefully placed his pipe in his pocket and picked up his gun and squirrels.

"I suppose you want me to cook those squirrels for you," remarked Mary.

Rodney turned with a grateful grin. "Why, yes, if you would be so kind to a poor old bachelor."

Mary snorted, as she looked up into his gay young face. "Run along and dress them, and mother and I will make a squirrel pie for supper."

As luck would have it another electrician did come to town, a boy with eager face and quick feet. He adjusted Mrs. West's vacuum cleaner, wired the lanterns on Mrs. Swanson's porch, and fixed the door bell for Mrs. Johnson. He hustled from morning till night and everyone liked him.

"Mary dear, you should not let him spend so much on you," remonstrated Mary's mother. "He's a poor young man and he can't afford it."

"Well, when his money is all gone he'll have to go to work and earn some," answered Mary, with a wise little smile.

But events took a more dramatic turn a few evenings later when Lena, the daughter of the bank president, ran in to see Mary.

"What do you think?" cried Lena excitedly, "Rodney has borrowed money of the bank and taken out a mortgage on his house!"

"Borrowed money?" asked Mary's mother aghast.

"I ought not to have told you," said Lena, guiltily. "It was confidential with my father."

"I'm glad that you told me," said Mary, thoughtfully.

"What do you suppose he is going to do with all that money?" questioned Lena with a wicked twinkle in her dark eyes.

Mary made a helpless gesture, and Lena laughed out merrily. "He must be going abroad on a wedding trip," she teased.

It was after Lena had left that the storm broke.

"I'm ashamed," said Mary's mother, "that a daughter of mine should drive a man into debt. Today all you girls think of is to have someone spend money on you. When I was young, the girl respected their young men and wanted them to save their money to be married."

"It isn't necessary now, when you can get everything on the installment plan," returned Mary.

"I notice sickness and doctor's bills are still old-fashioned," retorted her mother.

Nevertheless, Mary was worried, and there were no more expensive trips to town. Thanksgiving week came and, with it, the annual masquerade party. The young folks went to the town hall separately, and there was a merry hour penetrating the masks and choosing partners.

A tall Romeo bowed gallantly over Mary's head, and flung his velvet cape about her Puritan shoulders as he led her in line for the grand march.

"Don't be silly, Rodney" reproved Mary, her cheeks red below her mask. "They're all laughing at us."

"Oh, no, my dear," answered Rodney, "they all envy you. I am Romeo, the model lover of the world."

Mary giggled. "I think the new electrician would make a better model. He seems to have more speed."

Rodney leaned toward her impulsively, but Mary fled to a nook of cornstalks.

"Mary, will you marry me Thanksgiving Day?" he asked.

Mary laughed softly. "Not if you were the last man on earth. Do you think, for an instant, I'd marry a fellow who stood by and let another chap walk off with his job?"

"Don't you like my assistant?" smiled Rodney.

"Your assistant!" echoed Mary.

"Of course, dear," said Rodney. "I decided if I was ever going to win you I'd have to devote all my time to court. So I just hired Bill to take care of the business."

"But you took money out of the bank," wailed Mary.

"Of course. I'm going to remodel my house."

"Good heavens!" ejaculated Mary. "What will you do next?"

"Marry you, replied Rodney, calmly.

"You have saved me from drowning," said the young man, as he grasped his rescuer's hand. "You may marry my sister."

The rescuer glanced at the girl.

"Hi!" shouted the young man. "What are you doing?"

"Throwing you in again."

"Well, of all the nerve," she said, as she slapped his face, "Don't ever try to kiss me again."

"All right," he replied, meekly. "If that's how you feel about it, get off my lap."

When Duty Whispers

By Margaret Taylor

IN the promise of the coming dusk the jarring weariness of the day was forgotten. Chris Janie's tired spirits rose as she stood by the kitchen window. From the sitting room came Lucy's sweet voice. She was telling her grandfather the story of Cinderella. Grandfather, who had to sit patiently in his chair all day, chuckled softly. The day had been long and hard, tomorrow's light would bring new cares, but now for a little space at least one could look out on the peace of the hills—and dream.

"Chris Janie," Lucy came running from the sitting room. "Grandpa wants you to read the paper to him. I've told him five stories." She added this proudly.

"You're a dear little helper." Chris Janie turned to her small sister with a smile. "Poor Grandpa, I've been so busy, and he does like the news." Her grandfather brightened at the sight of his eldest granddaughter.

"My, my, Chris Janie! Seems as if you grow to look more like your grandmother every day."

"Was she pretty like our Chris Janie?" Lucy asked eagerly.

The old man nodded his head. His faded, blue eyes sought the window. "She was just like a flower, little one. It's been lonesome since she went." The old man had forgotten his hearers. Chris Janie picked up the newspaper, Lucy carried her doll over to the window.

Suddenly the little girl jumped up and down. "Joel's coming, Joel's coming, goodie, goodie."

"Hello, little Teddy Bear." He looked quickly across the room. "Hello, Christie—where's the folks?" His gray eyes still lingered on Chris Janie's soft, flushed cheeks.

"Hello, Joe. Aunt Melia's had one of her bad spells again. They've been gone nearly all day."

"That's a shame. Poor Aunt Melia's been sick a lot this Spring. Hope I'm in time for supper," Joel hung his cap on a nail and smiled into Lucy's happy face. "You'll have to take me in and see Grandpa, Lucy, while Christie's dishing up the beans. I know it's early," answering the elder girl's glance toward the clock, "but I'm going back to town tonight."

"Tonight," exclaimed Lucy, disappointedly.

Joel chuckled. "Only until midnight, kiddie. I'm going to take Christie with me. She hasn't been anywhere all Winter. You'll go, Christie?"

"Oh, Joel, how can I with Mother away?" asked Chris Janie, wistfully.

"I'll help get Grandpa to bed," answered Joel, "Lucy'll be asleep before we start—and Asa's here."

"But, Joe, there's thunderheads, and you know Grandpa's terribly afraid, and Lucy might wake up with the croup, and Asa sleeps out in the ell part—"

"And—and," mocked Joel gaily, "the world might come to an end if you had a little fun."

"Grandpa's calling," murmured Lucy, sleepily, as, two hours later, Chris Janie stood before her mirror brushing her soft chestnut hair. She slipped a blue dress over her head, tied the bit of ribbon that held the neck in place, and hurried into the next room. There was an odd clutch in Chris Janie's throat as she saw his hair like drifted snow on the pillow.

"I ain't asleep. Chris Janie," he whispered. "Aren't we going to have a big storm? I thought it lightened."

"I'm sorry, Joe, but I guess I won't go," answered Chris Janie slowly, Joel stared at her with wide eyes. "I can't leave, Joe. We're going to get a thunderstorm."

The little kitchen was very still. The rain was now splashing against the window panes.

The tinkling of the telephone bell crashed into the stillness. "Hello—yes, this is Chris Janie—what—Aunt 'Melia's dead—dead—oh, Mother. I can hardly hear you. Mother. You won't be home until tomorrow? Goodby."

Chris Janie turned from the telephone, the tears streaming down her cheeks. Joel was standing in the middle of the kitchen floor but she was not surprised.

"Aunt Melia's dead," she said simply. Suddenly she was sobbing her heart out on his breast. "Oh, Joe, I'm so glad I didn't go."

Joel gathered her close. "So'm I sweetheart," he said, huskily.

A Dub at Sports

By Phil Moore

FEMININE shrieks rent the air, Matt Howland jumped to his feet and ran to the water's edge. There he halted, then, catching his breath, dashed in and dived with more force than experience, into an incoming wave. He churned the water vigorously and succeeded in making some progress toward the girl floundering around several yards from the shore.

By some miracle she managed to stay above water until he reached her, whereupon she clasped him tightly around the neck and hung on frantically.

Matt tried to unclasp her arms and tread water at the same time. It would not work, and together they disappeared beneath the water.

When they came up, he was free and the girl appeared to be almost unconscious.

"Put your hand on my shoulder," he commanded, and, weakly, the girl obeyed.

They made slow progress toward the shore, but the girl's seemingly random strokes helped considerably. When Matt found he could touch bottom, he lifted her in his arms, staggered to the dry sand and collapsed.

Regaining consciousness, he found himself surrounded by an anxious group. The young lady he had dragged from a watery grave was apparently quite recovered from her unpleasant experience.

"Oh, you were brave to save me!" she cried, turning an admiring look upon him.

Matt smiled ruefully. "I'm not what you'd call a water dog," he confessed, "and when you hung onto my neck I thought we were goners, for sure."

There was general laughter, and then the girl introduced herself as Alberta Calhoun—"commonly called Bertie," she added. Introductions to the crowd followed.

Matt was planning to stay at the seaside resort two months. The rest of the jolly crowd were what they called "perennials"—their families spent each Summer there from May to October. It was a happy time for Matt, who had known far too little of carefree, young companionship in his 26 years.

His first week had been disappointing, in spite of all his eager expectations. Somehow, these youngsters, with so much time on their hands, had learned to do so many things, interesting things like tennis, and swimming, and golf, and dancing. They did these things well and but casually, and Matt would have given a year of his life to be as carelessly proficient. He just couldn't bear to show his amateurishness, and he remained alone.

Until after he rescued Bertie, that is. From then on he was a member in good standing, and any awkwardness he felt in his lack of skill was dissipated when he found Bertie equally helpless and eager to learn. Sympathetically he took her in tow, taught her all he knew, and in teaching, learned.

By the end of six weeks he could give a pretty good account of himself in the various sports, which record was not equalled, by Bertie. She had improved, but still lagged far behind her teacher in accomplishment.

His last night there found Matt distrait. He loved Bertie, but, after all, a few weeks were short acquaintance, and supposing she hadn't learned to care for him? His heart grew cold at the thought.

Matt wandered disconsolately out on the pier. He heard voices below him on the sand, but paid them small heed until his name was mentioned. To get up and move away might disclose his presence and prove embarrassing to all concerned. Matt remained silent—and listened.

An hour later, Bertie, passing by an open window at the club dance, saw Matt outside. She smiled a greeting. To her surprise, he scowled and turned contemptuously away. Hastily she ran to the door and started in search of him. He was not on the veranda, and she went down to the sand where the crowd usually gathered by a big boulder. Matt was there.

Timidly she touched his arm. "Has something happened, Matt?"

Roughly he brushed her hand aside. "Yes, something has happened. I've had my eyes opened to what a fool you've been making of me."

"Oh, no, Matt!" cried Bertie. "Not that!"

"A fool, I said," he repeated. "You, who had to be taught how to swim and dance and play tennis because you weren't very good at them! I heard how you've kidded me along, heard that you're the champion swimmer among the girls, the best dancer, the snappiest tennis player—oh, superlatively everything."

"Matt!" Bertie was crying, "did you hear one uncomplimentary thing said about you?"

"No," he had to admit, "but I feel like a fool! I've not had my Summers to play around in. I've had to work my way through school and college and I've had very little time for sports. That's why I am such a boob at them," he finished bitterly.

Bertie wiped her eyes. "That's just it!" she exclaimed eagerly. "Some of the bunch met and liked you, and they felt kind of sorry for you, too. You looked lonely," she explained. "That's why we fixed it up for you to rescue me; and we guessed why you were shy with us, so I volunteered to pretend I was a dub at sports—worse than you. We thought it would give you courage—to teach me—and it has," she cried. "You're almost as good as any of them now!"

Matt was ashamed. "I'm sorry I was disagreeable, Bertie." He sighed. "Well, my vacation's up tomorrow and I'm going home. The crowd—all of you—have given me the pleasantest two months I've ever known, and you've been very good to take a friendly interest in me, Bertie."

Bertie clasped his hand in both of hers and held it tightly. "My interest isn't just—friendly," she managed to say.

"Bertie," gasped Matt, "do you—do you honestly mean that?"

Bertie tried to answer, and couldn't. Slowly she pulled a by no means unwilling Matt toward her and held up her lips.

Molly and John ran into their neighbor's house and asked if they could play with Marjorie.

"Yes," said Marjorie's mother; "but does your mother know you are here?"

"Oh, yes," was the reply. "And we can stay to tea if we asked."

"What is the difference between firmness and obstinacy?"

"Firmness is a notable characteristic of women; obstinacy is a lamentable defect in men."

The Cracklin' of Thorns

By Claire Wesson

SWALLOWED it, hook, line and sinker," gurgled the narrator. "Met her over beyond Meeting House Hill, carried her pail of berries, and told her she was the prettiest ever. Ye gods, her freckles and her red hair! Stole a kiss and told her I'd see her tonight by the Spring. I'll bet she's there, too. What do you think of that, Uncle Whiz?"

"Think the devil is in you, bigger'n a woodchuck," said Whiz coldly. "Ought to have a good thrashin' before he gits the upper hand."

A shadow rather than a sound drew our eyes toward the further end of Whiz's counter. Freckled she was, and red-haired. Her gingham dress hung, limp and ugly, above cotton stockings and clumsy shoes. One brier-scratched hand at her throat, she stood gazing in shocked misery at Craig.

There was a lump in my throat and my eyes stung. When the girl turned and walked out, stumbling as if she did not see, I could have killed Bailey Craig. He laughed embarrassedly.

"As the cracklin' of thorns under a pot so is the laugher of the fool," quoted Whiz somberly.

"Call me a fool?" flared Bailey.

"There's a number of worse things I could call you," pursued Whiz.

"You'd better lay off that line if you want to keep trade," threatened the youth.

"I'll make out to git along without yours," the storekeeper assured him evenly.

Craig blustered out. Whiz gravely watching. Presently he said:

"Billy, son, run after Jeanie Collett. Likely she took the path through the woods. She won't mind you comin'. Tell her Grandpa Collett's pension check came this mornin'.

Eagerly I limped away. She didn't mind me—lame Billy Sholto. She came with me readily enough, but I couldn't bear to look at the white face and the hurt eyes, once so full of dreams.

Whiz said easily:

"Forgot your mail, Jeanie. Here's Miss Hosmer, the new teacher. Miss Hosmer, want you to meet two of our young folks."

Neither Jeanie nor I realized that the meeting was not accidental. Before we left, Miss Hosmer knew our love for study and our lack of means to pursue it. She knew that Jeanie often set her pretty fancies down in writing. We had both stepped into a new world, opened by the teacher's offer of help. Jeanie's look of strained misery had changed to quiet interest. I caught Whiz's satisfied look, and a light broke upon my 16-year-old brain, though I said nothing.

How we worked, each stimulated by the other! Months flew by apace. Two years later, left alone by her grandfather's death, Jeanie took his savings and went elsewhere to study. I found work that helped me to further education. We lost sight of each other. Still I never forgot, nor lost the hot desire to see Craig humbled.

Ten years, before the curtain rose upon the second act of our play, and again the scene was set in Whiz Whittaker's grocery store. I was spending an affectionate chat with "Uncle Whiz," grown gray, but the same staunch comrade.

We spoke of Jeanie's success with her stories that dealt so tenderly and truly with her native hills and her own folk; their homely wit and wisdom, their deep kindliness, their honesty and steadfastness—all the grand virtues that so eclipsed their faults.

Whiz was kindly exultant over my start as instructor in our state college.

A beautiful car purred up to the steps, and Bailey Craig, exuding prosperity at every pore, came in with the old swing.

A modest runabout stopped behind the big car. The driver appeared in the doorway, and Whiz proclaimed joyfully:

"Sho, now! If it ain't Jeanie Collett!"

A gracious lady was Jeanie, with a sweet, changing, lovable face and a crown of red-gold hair. Laughing and half-crying, she had his hands in hers.

"Uncle Whiz! Oh, you and Miss Hosmer! You two blessed conspirators. And I never guessed until long afterward. It was years before I could spare the money to come back to thank you. But now—"

Bailey Craig's self-assured voice interrupted:

"I must greet Miss Collett, for we are all proud of her. Many of our Summer colony are anxious to meet you socially, Miss Collett. It will be a delight to arrange it. May I have the pleasure of calling."

Jeanie bowed, heedless of the offered hand, and answered gravely:

"Many of them are already my very good friends. There will be scant time for playing about socially, Mr. Craig. I am a working woman and at home only to the old friends this Summer."

Bailey looked as nearly dashed as it was possible for him to look.

Whiz interposed: "Speakin' of old friends, Jeanie, look at this."

Jeanie lifted her eyes to the face that topped my six feet of lank body.

"Billy!" she said. "Oh, little Billy Sholto!"

"Little lame Billy," I assented.

"But your soul never limped, Billy," she said, quickly.

For no reason at all we looked at each other and laughed. My heart was singing.

"You're coming to supper," she declared. "You and Uncle Whiz and Miss Hosmer. Please Billy."

"Nothing could keep me away," said I, frankly.

She made her purchases and left. Bailey Craig suddenly slapped his knee and laughed.

"George!" he said. "It's that old story she heard me telling in the store years ago. Fancy her remembering that and resenting it! She's worth looking at now. Well, that'll be easily smoothed over. That's the woman of it. "You can't tell from the boy what the man's going to be."

"Guess you turned out 'bout as we thought you would," observed Whiz dryly.

Craig laughed, and laughing carried his overload of conceit outside. Whiz checked my impetuous movement.

"Let be, Billy," he said. "It's Jeanie's affair. She'll settle it Cracklin' thorns!"

The young husband could eat no more of his wife's dinner.

"That's a pity," she said, "for if you don't I shall have to give it to the dog!"

"Yes, it is a pity; he's such a nice dog!"

Woman's Privilege

By Parke Whitney

PLEASE, Mr. Fordham, tell father you can't give me work in your establishment. Call him and say you're too filled up—business depression—anything."

Mr. Fordham gazed half amusedly into the girl's pleading eyes. He leaned back and expelled a cloud of gray smoke.

"Your father," he said, "is one of my staunchest patrons. It would be decidedly against my policy to incur his disfavor."

"But don't you understand, Mr. Fordham? The girls will ostracize me politely and completely. And the irony of it will be this," her lips curling disdainfully. "I don't have to work and they will think I'm forced to on account of financial difficulties. Father is driving me to it because he thinks it will make a woman of me. He even hinted that I'd be useless in case he should suddenly go into bankruptcy—as if that were possible for father, with all his money."

The man's features failed to relax. Inwardly he was considering what a vain, selfish, good-looking little heap of perfume and pretty clothes she was.

"Many things are possible," he remarked tersely, pushing his chair up with a finality which meant that his time was valuable.

Nothing daunted, Thelma picked up her bag and walked to the door, where she turned to look back at the silent man in his chair.

"You'll tell father that you can't take me?" Her voice held a persuasive note.

Before an answer could come her way, the door was flung open in her direction, its unexpected force nearly knocking her over and sending her bag flying to the floor.

"I—I'm sorry." The young man, clad in not too immaculate working garb, recovered the unfortunate purse and handed it to her. After depositing a paper on the desk, he walked out with not a glance at her, and closed the door.

"Who is that impudent fellow?" she demanded angrily.

Fordham's answer was this time more instructive.

"He's Harold Austin, a young chap who came six months ago. A fine boy. Has started very low—in my shipping department, at a meagre salary. I see fine prospects in him. He likes work—good boy, that fellow."

She stood still in an effort to clear her mental chaos. There was something about that man's voice which she had liked, something about his face—his half embarrassed, half indifferent attitude.

Approaching the man at the desk she said:

"It isn't too late—to ask for employment?"

He smiled a bit inside. Funny kid she was. Queer, like all other women. Well, that was their privilege.

In the capacity of assistant to Mr. Jonathan Fordham's secretary, Thelma learned to look forward to her day's work at the office. Conditions at home, too, were not so formidable. Her people seemed proud of her.

Yet there was something missing. A face appeared continually to her, filling her first with hope, and as the weeks brought no materialization of her dreams with despair.

She had stayed rather late one evening to finish some duties over which she had lingered dully all afternoon. Today, somehow, she had lacked the incentive to work. As she adjusted her hat and touched a bit of powder to her nose, a thought suggested itself. She would walk by the shipping room where, if luck were with her, she might chance to meet him. Perhaps, though, she was foolish to let a man of his station impress her so deeply, and on such passing acquaintance—or, indeed, lack of acquaintance.

Her heart sank as she realized that it was late and everybody had gone for the night except the janitor, who was making his rounds.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Lane, but it is quite late and I should like very much to see you home."

She turned sharply, and then out of sheer weakness caught at the railing for support. Why, it was the same voice! The same face! Vaguely, she took note of the handsome tweeds he wore.

He offered to escort her to his car, and, her faculties still unaccustomed to the new train of circumstances, she acquiesced. Car? Surely, out of his salary he could not afford to operate an automobile! Her heart began to race as he helped her into a distinctive blue limousine.

As he left her at the door, he offered:

"May I have the pleasure of your company at lunch tomorrow?"

Then, as she dazedly assented, he added:

"Now, I shall drive over to the Fordhams."

"The Fordhams?" What would he be doing at that fashionable residence? He, a mere shipping clerk.

"I've been invited over for dinner," he informed her pleasantly.

One evening Harold Austin told her something, as they rode home together after an evening's entertainment at the theater.

"I didn't dare ask you to marry me before—ordinary laborer that I was. But now. Miss Lane—Thelma—I've been appointed assistant director at a handsome salary, and I feel—"

What he knew he did not put into words, but she understood, for hadn't she been hoping just for this?

"To think," he went on, "that I am the erstwhile suspended college student who hated to work. Why, my father was surprised when I got possessed of the fever and started work in his establishment as a comman—"

He stopped. But the secret was out.

"Y-your father—Mr. Fordham?" She was trembling.

His face went scarlet.

"I didn't mean to tell you this, Thelma, I—I wanted you to marry me for what I have made myself—not because I am his son. Ever since that day in the office—when I rudely flung the door open in your face—when I looked at you for a moment—Heaven knows I never was good at explaining!" he finished helplessly.

They were at her door. He bent over until their lips were close.

"The Fordhams—I mean father and mother—You see, I've told them all about you—and they want us over next Sunday—together."

"I understand that Mollie has taken to motor-car riding with great gusto."

Billy—"Yes, but she'd better be careful. Those circus fellows are bad eggs."

Pageant of Progress.

PETERS ADVENTURES IN ANIMAL LAND

By Florence Smith Vincent

"The Garden of the Moon where there awaits you all that your heart most desires!"

A cloud sailed across the face of the Man in the Moon, hiding it from sight, but the words of the Man in the Moon rang in Peter's ears. The boy looked about him. Why, the garden was full of happy boys and girls. Some were playing games among the flowers, while others were scrambling about over the rocks, calling joyously to each other. Strange he hadn't noticed them before. Come to think of it though, on the way up he had heard voices—voices that he hadn't heeded because he had been so afraid the little girl would fall.

"Is this the Garden then?" asked he. And eagerly the little girl nodded.

"But how did I get here?" Peter was puzzled. "Surely I couldn't have wished myself up when I never knew there was such a place."

"You've forgotten" chuckled the Man in the Moon, suddenly popping out from behind the cloud again. "But don't let that worry you 'tis a habit Earth folks have. Just take my word for it—you wanted as badly as ever boy wanted anything to find out what happened to the Cow when he"—"Jumped over the Moon!" Peter took the words right out of Mr. Moon Man's mouth. "Where is that Cow?"

"Over yonder!" The Man in the Moon could not very well point his finger because he had no finger to point, but the little girl helped him out and pointed hers. And sure enough Mistress Moo had a field of green corn all to herself and was feasting upon sweet, juicy ears.

"My word, how that Cow did grow to hate her pasture bars! Every afternon, come milking time, she'd make up her mind never to go near them again. "I'll hide from the hateful dog who snaps and yaps at my heels" she declared. And she would amble to the woods and trust to the shadows to conceal her, but it was no use. That keen scented hound always found her out and drove her through the gate and into the barnyard. Once there was no escape, nothing for it but to go to meekly to her stall. She dreamed of a long, long day in which milking time would never come. She wished with all her heart for fredom to roam and a private pasture of green corn out of which no angry farmer'd chase her! And now she has her wish. Let's see how long 'twill suit her!"

THE HOUND DROVE HER THROUGH THE GATE INTO THE BARNYARD.

Next: "So Long, but no Longer."

DINNER STORIES

A negro went fishing. He hooked a big catfish, which pulled him overboard. As he crawled back into the boat, he said, philosophically, "What I wanna know is dis. Is dis niggah fishin', or is dis fish niggerin'?"

Captain Loveless had strong objections to what he called the "new minister's high-brow talk." The captain's own language was of a primitive and unadorned variety, and nothing pleased him more than a chance to translate the minister's remarks to another old retired mariner, Captain Williams. The latter was deaf, and the minister's voice often failed to reach him. One night at a neighborhood gathering Captain Williams, in the course of a vivid narrative, had referred to the "big fire in '81." "was it the consensus of opinion," said the minister, "that the conflagration was the result of some accident or the work of an incendiary?" "Hey?" said deaf Captain Williams, turning to his faithful friend for light. "What he wants to know," called Captain Loveless, in his shrillest tone, "is whether the big fire was sot or ketched."

Because she would insist on eating with her fingers instead of using her fork, little Mary Frances' hands had been smacked several times at the meal. When she told her mother that she could not eat unless she used her fingers, her mother pushed Mary Frances' plate away and threatned to put her to bed without supper.

Being deprived of food was too big a sacrifice to her, and she told her mother that she would eat with her fork if she might remain at the table.

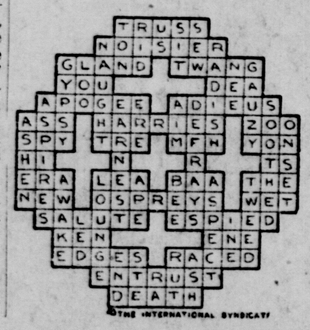

"All right then," said her mother "you may finish your meal."

"All right," said Mary Frances "I eat with my fork now and when I grow up I eat with my fingers."

A Kansas man lost control of his automobile because a mouse crawled up his leg. Perhaps the rodent thought the car was an old trap.

SUGGESTIONS FOR SOLVING CROSS-WORD PUZZLES

Start out by filling in the words of which you feel reasonably sure. These will give you a clue to other words crossing them, and they in turn to still others. A letter belongs in each white space, words starting at the numbered squares and running either horizontally or vertically or both.

Locals Snatch League Victory

New Castle Goes Into Tie With Ellwood City For Section IV Lead

REIDER-OSTROSKY PLAY BRILLIANT

New Castle High's floor team went into a deadlock with Ellwood City for the leadership in Section IV on Friday night by downing Mars High 29 to 18 in a fast battle staged on the Mars court.

The locals by their brilliant victory over the Butler county passers last night remain undefeated in league competition. New Castle High was the underdog in the game Friday night but it was a case of the dog turning and snapping the owner. The locals had by far the best balanced team and their teamwork offset the offensive ability of the Mars tossers.

The Red and Black team shot into an early lead with Reider and Franklin leading the way. The playing in the first quarter was close and hard.

Locals Take Lead.

At half time the locals were ahead 15 to 13. Reider, Franklin and McGrath having tallied for the New Castle outfit, Eythe and Moore were the big guns for the Mars team.

Soon after the start of the third quarter the locals opened up with a display of offensive ability that sent them into a handsome lead and they were never in danger after the third period. Reider and Ostrosky carried the attack for the Red and Black team in the third and fourth quarters by scoring two markers apiece.

Ostrosky and Klaber put up a fine guarding game last night, holding the Mars team to but one field goal in the entire last half of the battle.

From the foul line the New Castle team showed to the best advantage gaining 11 out of 19 tries, while Mars registered but 4 out of 11 attempts.

The game was mighty rough in spots with Eythe, McCandless, Reider and Ostrosky being ejected from the floor via the personal foul route.

Silman and Richards displaced Reider and Ostrosky and showed up mighty well in the short time they occupied posts.

The lineup and summary:

New Castle—29.		Mars—18
Reider	F	McDonald
Franklin	F	Eythe
McGrath	C	Moore
Klaber	G	Ziegler
Ostrosky	G	Vecerella

Subs: McCandless, Morrison, Silman, Richards.

Field goals: Reider 4, Franklin 2 McGrath, Ostrosky 2, McDonald, Eythe 3, Moore 2, Ziegler.

Fouls: New Castle 11 out of 19; Mars 4 out of 11.

Referee, Meininger.

League Lead At Stake Tonight In Church Circuit

The leadership of the New Castle Church League is at stake tonight in the Sacred Heart-First Methodist game. The game is scheduled to get under way at 7 o'clock.

The Hearts defeated Croton last week and the Methodists defeated the Christians, sending the loop into a deadlock.

The Lockley brothers who were stars with the Acmy Five last year will be in the Methodist lineup for tonight. Indications are that the game tonight will be hard fought.

The probable lineups:

Hearts		Methodists
Venditto	F	Barber
Tomasello	F	S.Lockley
Bartlett	C	Ray
DiThomas	G	E. Lockley
F. Marcella	G	Brooks

Subs.—Banjo, Maielli, DiMuccio, Mitchell and McIvor.

FROM CATALINA TO CALIFORNIA—MAYBE BY FEG MURRAY

Copyright, 1927, by Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Everything is ready for the much-advertised Catalina island swim, otherwise known as the "Wrigley ocean marathon". The mightiest swimmers of the past, from Beowulf, who "swam in his armor for five days and nights," down to Captain Webb, the first man to swim the English channel, will watch with interest from the heights of Olympus (or wherever they happen to be) this newest attempt of mere man to conquer the angry waters of the sea.

William Wrigley, owner of Santa Catalina island, the Chicago "Cubs, the Los Angeles "Angels" and numerous packages of chewing gum, has offered a cash prize of $25,000 to the winner of the race, with an additional $15,000 for the first woman to finish in case a man should win. This would be so much "sugar" for Gertrude Ederle, but vaudeville looked easier to the first of her sex to swim across the English channel, and so the race lacks a lot of color that her presence would give to it.

However, with Henry Sullivan and Clarence Toth, the first and second Americans to conquer the English channel, competing, and Norman Ross, who, until the advent of Johnnie Weismuller, was the greatest swimmer in the world, also entered, the race is bound to be very interesting. What a big splash it will be, with from 150 to 200 mermaids and mermen, clad in everything from axle grease to bathing suits, all paddling out from the isthmus of the famous island to try to "propel themselves by motions of their arms and legs" to the mainland of California, 22 miles away! Each contestant, remember, is accompanied by a boat, so the water is going to be very crowded indeed at the start of this unusual event.

Among the possible winners of the chewing-gum magnate's gold are the two English channel swimmers, Sullivan and Toth, who are both slow, but fat and experienced, and so are expected to finish. Norman Ross, who showed by his training jaunt in the icy waters of Golden Gate in December that he is in good condition to withstand the grind, is a swimmer who must not be overlooked when possible winners are considered. "The Moose," as Ross is called, now weighs close to 250 pounds, and, though he has been out of active competition for a couple of years, has the speed, courage and stamina necessary for a contest of this kind. Norman won 11 races in the inter-allied games swimming meet, as well as placing in the relay and playing water-polo. He is a horse for work.

Leo Purcell of the Olympic club of San Francisco, is a pip of a long-distance swimmer, and can walk away from either Toth or Sullivan, but it is doubtful if he can stand the long grind. Let's go, you disciples of Ulysses and Leander! May the winner pitch for the Cubs in the next world series!

Feg Murray Says—

"The skis the limit," said the winter sports enthusiast as he took the train to Florida by mistake.

College League Season To Open

Westminster To Battle Thiel At New Wilmington Gym This Evening

(Special To The News)

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., Jan. 15.—For apparently no reason at all, the Westminster gym will house one of the largest crowds that has ever witnessed a Tri-State Conference tilt here Saturday evening, when the Blue and White passers clash with Thiel. The game will start at eight o'clock.

It seems that basketball fans of the district have "taken" to this year's Westminster outfit. Whether or not their interest will keep, however, depends much on the manner in which Lawther's pupils handle the Thiel opposition.

The Westminster contingent has thus far participated in four contests, each of which resulted in wins. The most impressive of these was over the barnstorming Adrian College passers, but then, the Michiganites were a tired lot when they played here, because of successive contests.

Thiel will be accompanied by a large group of supporters. This is always the case when the Lutherans come here. The Greenville collegians have not been meeting with marked success thus far, but Lawther of Westminster fears them. The visitors have several excellent shots and the Blue and White defense is certain to have its troubles.

Coach Lawther has devoted much time this week to developing the technique of the team's play. Offensive plays have been reviewed again and again, while the defense has had a thorough brushing up. It is very likely that the same team that faced the alumni will oppose the Thiel invaders. If so, Conners of New York City and Crowell of Sharon will be at the forwards, Gamble of Sharon at center, with Lewis of Farrell and Ayres of Canonsburg at the guards. Not one of these men are veterans.

Monday night Westminster goes to Beaver Falls to play Geneva. Wednesday evening Allegheny will be here, and Saturday night Bethany.

Bert Walker Claims Ty Cobb And Tris Speaker Have Been Dropped From Baseball Because They Negotiated With Promoters In Regard To Third League

(International News Service)

DETROIT, Jan. 15.—Bert Walker, sporting editor of the detroit Times in a copyright article today says:

"Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker were dropped from organized baseball because they were accused of negotiating with promoters of a proposed third league to rival the American and National Leagues.

"When a high American League official was quoted in the Times yesterday as saying Cobb and Speaker would never again appear in the American League he added, 'The half has never yet been told.'

"Well, here is the other half.

"Cobb and Speaker were dropped from organized baseball, not because they were accused of having made a bet on a ball game back in 1919, but because they are suspected of having flirted with eastern promoters with the idea of forming a third league to run in opposition to the American and National Leagues.

"The incident of 1919 was merely a subterfuge. That Commissioner Landis does not consider matters that happened back before he took office as significant today is indicated by the fact that immediately after he dipped his brush in white-wash and cleansed the players accused of having thrown games in 1919, he immediately recommended to the rules committee of the majors a statute of limitations. He recommends at incidents happening prior to the time he took office in 1920 be outlawed.

Covering Real Issue.

'I have it on the best authority that more than a year ago it was charged that both Cobb and Speaker did confer with the men who were trying to establish a league to rival the American and National. It is understood that it was proposed that each of these stars should lead a team in the new circuit.

"Ty Cobb himself seems to verify this suspicion for he told the writer that he knew he was slated to go more than a year ago and that only the testimonial banquet given him in Detroit, when he was lauded to the skies, saved him for the time being.

"This new information doubtless will explain why both Landis and Johnson have been so reticent regarding the status of Cobb and Speaker. They have tried, doubtless, to suppress the real reason for the dismissal of the two foremost players fearing that it might lend encouragement to prospective rivals of the major leagues.

"When correspondents wrote to Cobb, immediately after his withdrawal from the Tigers, and suggested that he and Speaker head a movement for a third league, Ty told this writer that he would not consider it.

"It would take too much money," he said, 'and it is not practical.'

'That remark alone would indicate that he had studied the situation and knew what he was talking about.

"The alleged acts of Ty and Tris that brought about their banishment took place early in 1926 or late in 1925."

Evans City high defeated Butler 24 to 15 in a section IV game played at Evans City on Friday night. The Evans City team showed a wonderful improvement over its work in the first game of the season when they were downed by the New Castle team 32 to 16 on the local court.

By their defeat last night the Butlerites drop down to second place in the league standing. Ellwood City and New Castle with two victories and no defeats are deadlocked for the leadership in the scholastic loop. Ellwood City defeated Zelienople 18-15 earlier in the week.

Dundee Defeats Pacific Battler

Roberts Drops Dundee With Blow To Jaw In Fourth

JOE COMES BACK AND TAKES AWARD

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
Sports Editor Internat'al News Service

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—For 40 breathless minutes last night the immortal Stanley Ketchel lived again in the flesh and blood and fighting heart of a young Italian from Baltimore, who today is not far from the welterweight championship of the world. For Joe Dundee, hit on the jowl in the first few minutes of play by Eddie Roberts in San Francisco, came back, even as Ketchel did against Billy Papke, and in getting the decision at the end of 10 rounds, showed that he had about everything except the ability to swallow an ivory cue ball.

First of all, he was as tough as an old suspender and proved it in the fourth round when Roberts crossed the dreaded right that ended matters so abruptly in their first fight. It almost was a repetition of the San Francisco disaster, for Dundee forsook the perpendicular for a long count and then weaved his way to the welcome bell.

Roberts Muffs Chance

This was Roberts' big chance and he gave it a Snodgrass, muffing the play badly, although he had upward of two minutes in which to finish a man who didn't know whether he was in a fight or a frolic.

Second, Dundee had speed, and he used it all the way to left-hand the other gent silly. Third, he was ring smart and always was one jump ahead of the game, barring that slight misunderstanding in the fourth round.

Finally, he could punch, and Roberts knew it full well before the end of the tenth round. For Joseph went boldly to the attack whenever possible, which was often, and only the bell saved Roberts from a knockout in the eighth.

Dundee Takes Seven

In all, the writer gave Dundee seven rounds, called two for Roberts and another was a stand-off.

The recapitulation sounds the part of an easy victory for Dundee, but, if you think that way you wrong me deeply. It was one of the greatest fights the town has known in years and there wasn't a moment when Roberts didn't have a white man's chance.

The boy is a puncher, sure enough, and he can block very neatly with his chin without visible annoyance. His legs have the slightly convex trend of the true hitter and the gent has real speed, particularly with that right. But he can't accept them with any degree of equanimity in the body and it was Dundee's punching below that pared Roberts' speed down to a saunter in the late rounds.

The first three went to Dundee without particular incident, barring the fact that Roberts scored with an overhead right near the end in the third, giving due warning of what was to come.

Dundee Goes Down

It came early in the fourth. Roberts led with a left and, as Dundee head-slipped the punch the coast entry followed through with a right cross. It was the same punch that knocked Joseph into the right field stands at the first fight and Joseph tendered it exactly the same reception. He flopped like a stuck balloon, arms outflung and head canted back on the canvas at a sickening angle.

But Dundee was in there to win this fight and no man ever won on the floor. So he got up and, goofy as he was, he managed to slip another right lead and hold on. Right after the break Roberts scored with a right and left and then followed in to finish it, but somehow he had punched himself out and toward the end of the round Dundee was fighting back so well that he hooked Roberts back on his heels with a left.

Roberts Grows Weaker

So much for Roberts, at least at this stage of his development.

A first-class fighter couldn't have missed in this round. The rest, with the exception of one round, was all Dundee, for he became progressively stronger as Roberts became weaker and it was a good bet that the latter wouldn't have lasted much beyond the tenth.

However, no sprinter ever scored a victory at 101 yards and since last night's fight only was scheduled to go ten rounds, they paid off at that point. And while they were about it they were forced to concede that this young man, having rocked Dundee with rights in the seventh, eighth and tenth, was just as dangerous then as he was in the first.

Evidence Shows Attempt To Wreck Southern Flyer

(International News Service)

ATLANTA, Jan. 15.—Aroused by evidence that a deliberate attempt was made to wreck the Ponce De Leon, crack Florida to Chicago train, at Lindale last night, the Georgia public service commission ordered a thorough investigation today.

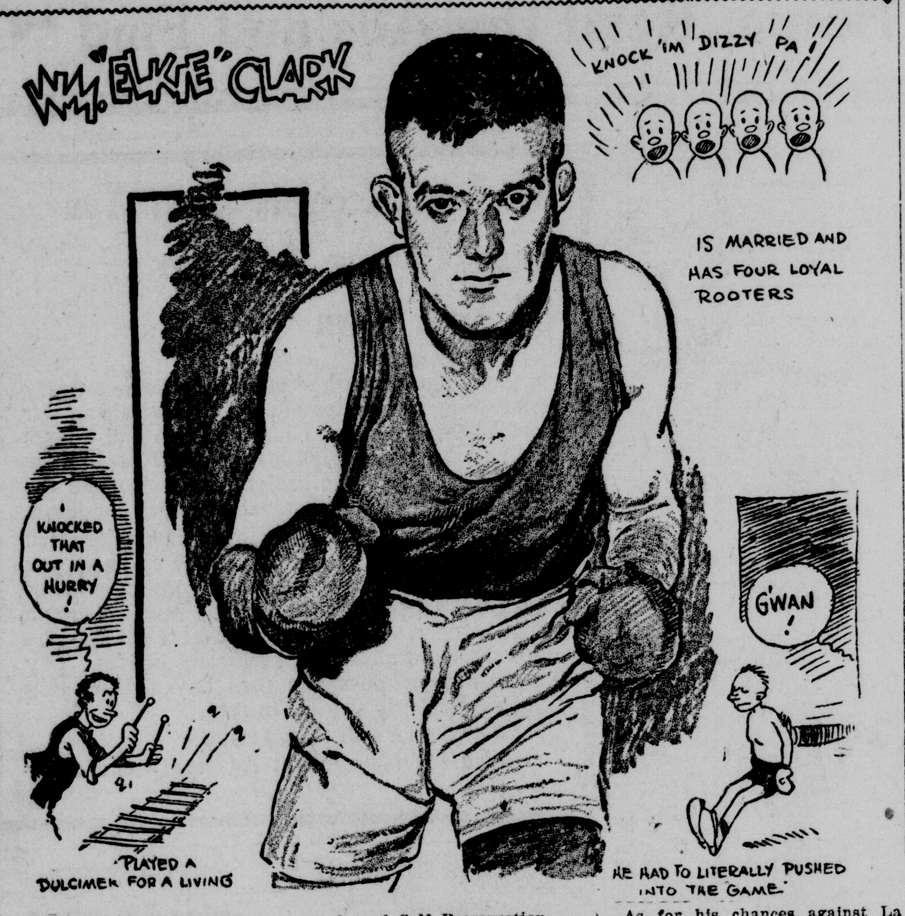

The Ponce De Leon is the same train that figured in a disastrous wreck December 28 at Rockmart, resulting in the death of 30 persons.

A preliminary investigation by southern railway officials revealed that a 16-foot signal light had been removed and thrown into a nearby sewer, causing the Ponce De Leon to pass through the open switch. The locomotive and three cars left the rails.

J. G. Waitt, engineer of the train, was seriously injured. The station agent declared the light was burning properly a half hour before the derailment.

Tiniest Fighter Carries British Lion's Stiffest Punch

By NORMAN E. BROWN

The best little fighter Great Britain now boasts—the man who stands the best chance of restoring some semblance of class to the game in the British Isles by virtue of his tiny left hand—is now in the U. S.

More than that, he will make a bid to win back the world's flyweight title once held by Jimmy Wilde, idol of the British public. And this first fight will be staged within a few days almost—Jan. 21.

Jimmy Wilde, little giant that he was, was England's sole remaining ring champion when he climbed into the ring against Pancho Villa, Filipino lad, in the U. S. in 1923, and when he went down in the seventh round under the merciless pummeling of the little brown lad England's only ring crown went with him.

Clark's first opponent in this country will be none other than Fidel La Barba, present flyweight champion of the world. Hence the revival of England's hopes—and unusual interest in Clark in this country.

Act of Self Preservation.

Clark is a boxing oddity, so to speak. He was 24, married and a proud papa when he decided to take up boxing seriously. Previous to that time he had been an entertainer in the "pubs" of London. The income was regular but small. Clark's ability in amateur tourneys drew attention of boxing fans and he was urged to enter the pro game. He did.

A little over two years ago he was literally "pushed" into the tournament for the new Lord Lonsdale belt, offered by the National Sporting club of London in its efforts to determine a successor to Wilde's British title, Jimmy having retired. Clark wasn't considered a possible winner by the experts but came through the tourney undefeated and won the belt.

Clark, while not as clever a boxer as Wilde, carries a rep of packing a terrific wallop. He has a left hand punch, a sort of half-jab, half uppercut, that is mean. He used it to advantage in his European fights.

As for his chances against La Barba there is no real basis for speculation. Only one thing stands in Clark's favor. Most of the bouts in England and on the continent run 20 rounds if they go the limit. Clark is used to these longer bouts. This means that he can speed up for La Barba and carry the champ at a fast pace if he cares to. If La Barba chooses to fight cautiously and feel his way Clark, by taking the lead, may outpoint the champ.

"MITTING" CLARK

He's 28 years old, married and has four children.

Started boxing when 24.

Played dulcimer for living before entering ring.

Won new Lonsdale belt, emblematic of flyweight title, in London in 1924.

Won European title by defeating Montreil.

Has defended title four times since—against Merlo, French champ, twice against Maracchini, conqueror of Merlo, and against Kid Socks.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

The efforts of "Hack" Wilson, outfielder, to have his salary check for the coming season lifted a trifle by the Chicago Cubs brings to mind one game in which the husky young gent, then a rookie in the big show, starred.

Wilson was with the Giants at the time—1924. It was early in the summer. The Giants were struggling along at the top of the National League.

The Cubs were threatening McGraw's team, however.

The Giants and Pirates tangled up in a series. The score was 4 to 1 in favor of the Pirates in one of the games when the Giants went to bat in the seventh inning. Wilbur Cooper, leftie superb, was pitching for the Pittsburgh team.

Jackson, first man up, socked a single. Heinie Groh was figuring out some way to get on when Cooper helped him by hitting him on the knee with a curve ball that slipped. Old Hank Gowdy stepped up and delivered a single that scored Jackson. Freddy Lindstrom went in to run for the willing but slow Hank, and Frank Snyder went to bat for Joe Oeshcger, Giant hurler, who had taken the worst of it all afternoon.

Snyder threw the Giant fans into hysterics of glee by pasting a single to right, scoring Groh with his bruised knee. Lindstrom made third on the play.

Ross Young's foul fly deadened the delirium a bit. The cheering was revived again, however, when Frankie Frisch reached first on a pass.

Then up came "Hack" Wilson. It isn't written in the record whether Cooper purposely passed Frisch to get at Wilson or temporarily lost control. Whatever the reason, the fact was that "Hack" stood at the plate with the bases full and three runs needed to win the ball game.

The crowd was still taking in the situation when Wilson, short, stocky and swinging his bat from the "tail", leaned on the second ball Cooper pitched and drove it deep between right and center for a triple. The score was 6 to 4 in the Giants' favor.

Virgil Barnes finished the game on the hill for the Giants and held the Pirates helpless. The victory gave the Giants a firmer grip on first place. The Cubs took a beating that day from the Dodgers.

As for "Hack". Well, the hit simply verified "Hack's" belief that he could hit big league pitching—and helped win him his big league spurs.

The interesting news that Germany will re-enter the Davis tennis cup matches this year is followed closely by the announcement from Austria, the country which fought side by side with Germany in the World War, that its tennis enthusiasts are ready to seek honors in the cup matches again—their third attempt since the war to win a place in the netting sun.

Austria's status in the tennis world was well established before the world conflict halted international athletics of all kinds—with the exception of shaving by candlelight.

In fact, the Hapsburg country entered the Davis matches the first time back in 1904, being one of the first European countries to take interest in the contests. This will be the seventh time a team from that country is entered.

I Was Thinking, the Other Day, About—

Two Ex-Yankees May Form Part of Bill Carrigan's Baseball Lineup

"Pee Wee" Wanninger, young infielder, and Freddy Hofmann, somewhat experienced catcher, both of whom were with the Yankees in 1925, may be in the regular lineup for the Red Sox when Bill Carrigan leads his team onto the field next April. Sox obtained both from St. Paul little while ago. Wanninger may oust Rigney from shortstop berth and Hofmann is a big league catcher right now.

Two Fast Games Billed In Industrial League

Rick-Overlands Will Meet P. & L. E. Quintet At Eight O'clock

East Side Merchants To Play P. R. R. Team In League Tonight

Two fast games will feature the playing in the City Industrial league for tonight at the Y. M. C. A. floor. The first game of the evening will find the Rick-Overlands pitted against the P. and L. E. quintet and the second game will bring together the East Side Merchants and the Pennsy Railroad tossers.

The first game of the evening will start at 8 o'clock. The Overlands owing to their past performances are favorites over the P. and L. E. boys, but the railroaders may spring a suprprise and upset the dope bucket. The P. and L. E. team has yet to taste victory in the league competition. They have dropped four straight.

The East Side Merchants with a well balanced outfit will more than likely defeat the Pennsy passers The Pennsy tossers have hit a good stride in the past few games and have caused plenty of trouble to the league leaders.

The Merchants have a chance to advance into second place tonight should they snatch a victory while the Overlands must win to retain their berth.

Blame Railroad Crew For Fatal Georgia Wreck

Interstate Commerce Commission Finds Engineer And Fireman At Fault

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Blame for the southern train wreck at Rockmart, Ga., on December 23, in which 19 persons were killed and 123 injured, was placed today by the interstate commerce commission upon two employes of the road—Engineer Keith and Road Foreman of Engines Pearce.

The commission found, after investigation, that "the failure of Road Foreman of Engines Pearce and Engineer Keith either to have thorough understanding as to the contents of a train order which required the train to take a siding at Rockmart for another train, or failure of Pearce to remember contents of the order" was responsible for the disaster.

(International News Service)

LANCASTER, Pa., Jan. 15.—The large plant of the Wright Baking company at New Holland, near here was destroyed by fire early today, entailing a loss of $100,000.

The fire, believed to have started from an overheated cake oven, spread rapidly throughout the building and 12 volunteer fire companies from the eastern end of the county fought the blaze for two hours, preventing its spread to adjoining buildings.

Eleven years ago the Wright Baking company plant on the same site burned to the ground.

PUT CHAINS ON! KEEP THEM ON!

Put on your chains and keep them on, is the advice of the district Engineer of the State Highway Department, who says he never knew the roads to be as icy and slippery as they were yesterday.

The rain that fell Thursday night froze in a glare of ice that has made the cement roads like a dance floor. He who tries to travel the roads without chains is sure out of luck and even with chains one may find himself stranded along the road and unable to climb a hill.

For the roads are so terribly icy and the ice is so hard that no matter if the chains have all the number of cross chains on one is likely to find his wheels spinning uselessly if he should happen to lose momentum on the brow of a hill. But if one is able to keep up power and his momentum does not fall too low most of the hills in this part of the district can be made although the flivver is likely to do an auto waltz on the way up the hill.

The Highway Department informs us that they have been able to help the worst places by placing ashes on them but it would be impossible to ash it all for it is a general condition.

Hint Collusion In Examinations

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Charges of collusion in the examination of 200 applicants for posts in the diplomatic service are being investigated by the state department, it was learned today.

Striking similarity in many of the replies received from applicants has led department officials to believe that advance information as to the questions to be asked was obtained by at least half of the men seeking the posts. If any evidence of dishonesty is turned up in the inquiry "vigorous action" will be taken against those implicated, it was said.

Do Rent Receipts Keep You From Owning A Home Of Your Own

Why pay rent when you buy a home on easy terms from the houses advertised for sale in our Real Estate Column. There you will find houses of all sizes and descriptions, in every part of the city, and you will find dealers who will make the terms to suit your individual financial condition.

If you are working for a moderate salary, tell your problems to the Realtor and he will help you to convert the rent you are paying into a home of your own. A few years of paying rent will buy a house. It has been estimated that a person who rents 30 years pays for at least six houses. Pay for your own house and then buy another that some one will pay you for in rent.

The Realtor will tell you how.

N. Y. STOCKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 15. — Railroad stocks were pushed to the front in the short session of the stock market today. Renewal of merger discussion affecting some of the well known transportation systems, with prospects of new bomcinations of the smaller roads at strategic points, stimulated speculative buying of stocks which have been comparatively inactive of late.

The downward trend in motor stocks continued, the same tendency being in evidence in the high-priced industrial and specialty stocks which led the rally in the early part of the week General Motors and United States Steel were freely offered in professional speculative quarters, and prices here were inclined moderately downward. The oil stocks made a good showing, good buying being in evidence in Standard of New Jersey, Pure Oil, Skelly and Phillips Petroleum.

The common and preferred stocks of Wheeling and Lake Erie, Western Maryland, Chicago and Alton and the reorganied St. Paul road led the activity in the so-called speculative rail group. Wheeling and Lake Erie common advanced to 32, while the preferred stock reached a new high at 58. The Northwestern rails, with Colorado and Southern attained a slightly higher market rating, Great Northern preferred moving up another point to 86¾.

The battle of the big railroad interests for representation on the board of Lehigh Valley was reflected in a continuation of the spirited buying of the stock which created such a sensation at Friday's close.

Short covering of the industrial and motor stocks, combined with investment and speculative buying of the rails and oils, accounted for the firm tone of the whole market in the final period Great Northern preferred and Northern Pacific led the railroad shares, while Phillips and Mid Continent were the outstanding performers in the petroleum group.

Speeding Auto Crashes Into Two Buildings And Pedestrian

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 15.—Speeding down a crowded street in the busines district here today an automobile which police alleged was driven by William Cleveland, 33, a negro, crashed into the front of a restaurant, struck John Barecki 47 of Ambridge a pedestrian and careened into another building where it was wrecked.

Barecki and Cleveland were rushed to a hospital where it was found that the former suffered a fractured leg and internal injuries and the negro was believed to have a fractured skull.

Hundreds of pedestrians scurried to safety as the car sped over the curbing and crashed into the window amidst a shower of glass. Police said that a large quantity of lingerie was found in the wrecked automobile.

Would Welcome Mediatory Act In Nicaragua

Three Central American Governments Offer Services

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. — The American Government "would welcome" the mediatory efforts of any Central American Republic to settle the political differences between Dr. Juan Sacasa and Adolfo Diaz, rival claimants for the presidency of Nicaragua, which have drawn intervention by the United States marines, Secretary of State Kellogg said today.

Thus far, it was learned, three Central American Governments, Costa Rica, Guatamala and Salvador, have proferred their good offices to adjust the Nicaraguan civil war. Of the three, the offer of President Jiminez of Cost Rica appears to have the best chances for success, Dr. Sacasa has been quoted as favorable to it.

Thirteen Dead In Chicago As Result Of Cold

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—The toll of the greatest Chicago cold wave since Januar 21, 1924, was set at 13 today as a slight rise in the thermometer from the official "low" of nine below, bore out the weatherman's prediction of more moderate temperatures by tonight.

The fatalities were partially due to conditions resulting from the storm but not directly caused by arctic weather, more than six having resulted from accidents.

SET FAIR DATES LATER IN FALL

Owing to the fact that they have found it more profitable tohold the New Castle fair later in the month of September the board of directors of the Fair association have set the date for this as September 27, 28, 29, 30. In 1925 the fair was held around the middle of September and the directors found that it was not as well attended as they had expected. In 1926 the date was changed it to the end of the month and more profitable to all stands and shows as well as affording those attending it a better exhibit.

To hold the fair around this date yearly was decided by the directors at their meeting held recently.

Mercer County Tax Millage Same As Last Year

MERCER, Pa., Jan. 15.—From present indications there will be no change in the county millage from the 12 mill rate of the past two years when the 1927 rate is set, is the opinion of County Commissioner Thomas D. Beatty, who discussed the county assessment for 1927, yesterday.

All of the county districts are in excepting the large towns of Sharon, Farrell and Greenville. Until the tax levie is made no work on drawing up the tax duplicates for delivery to the county collectors can be made.

Should the tax levy remain fixed by decision of the board of commissioners work on the duplicates can start on those that are in.

There are 58 assessors in the county that have delivery of annual assessments to make to the County Commissioners' office.

Grove City Christmas Seals Sale Total $702

GROVE CITY, Pa., Jan. 15.—The largest sale of Christmas seals in the history of the town is reported of that which took place here during the holidays, when they totaled $702.18. The sale was conducted by the Civic Club of the town with Mrs. B. B. Montgomery as chairman of the committee.

The nearest approach to this amount was a $500 sale. Based on the 1926 population of this community, the ladies are given of this total amount $455.60 in the division of the sum with the national organization. This is said to be equivalent to 80 per cent of the sum. Of the remainder the ladies are given 88 per cent, which keeps here for the charitable work of the club the greater portion of the money derived from the sales.

Set Precedent In Beaver County

Man Required To Pay To Support Of Victim's Family For 10 Years

ANOTHER HELD IN JAIL FOR BIG BOND

By WILBERT W. ANDERSON, International News Service Special Correspondent.

BEAVER, Pa., Jan. 15. — Precedent was set in Beaver county here recently when Judge William A. McConnell, sitting in sentence session, placed Mike Warner, 50, on probation for twelve years on condition he contribute $10 weekly for the support of the children of the man he was convicted of killing.

Warner struck Dan Mitchell, Beaver Falls, over the head with an iron bar, killing him, the prosecution brought out at the trial. The jury learned that Mitchell was intoxicated at the time of the killing and with other facts at hand returned a verdict of voluntary manslaughter, recommending extreme mercy.

Mitchell left a widow and seven children, three of whom are small. The county's only alternative would have been to commit Warner to the Western Penitentiary at Pittsburgh. The family thus would have been thrown upon the mercy of friends and the county poor board.

In passing sentence, Judge McConnel said he believed enforcement of the sentence requiring payment of money to the widow and children would be just punishment and would keep the family from becoming a public charge.

Another precedent, for Beaver county at least, was set when Judge Frank E. Reader ordered Willis Miller, of Midland, indicted for the murder of his brother and acquitted by a jury, to post bond of $5,000 to insure his good behavior for a period of five years.

Miller is still in jail, unable to furnish bond, and court officials say he is likely to spend five years there unless he can arrange bond. He was indicted for murder and voluntary manslaughter, it being charged by the commonwealth that he shot and killed his brother, "Alabama Joe" Miller at "Hell's Half Acre," near the Pennsylvania-Ohio line on September 18, 1925.

Dissatisfied with the verdict of acquittal, Judge Reader said he was "satisfied the testimony would have justified a verdict of homicide of some degree."

The court then ordered Miller to post bond for good behavior, basing his action on an ancient English act, which, although passed by the English parliament in 1360, is still in effect in Pennsylvania, according to Judge Reader.

Foster's Weather Prognostication

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—A storm wave of mild intensity will cross continent during week centering on January 17; this storm wave will occur during a period of rather severe and frequent temperature changes that will cause average temperatures to be about normal east of Rockies and below normal west of Rockies, but storm force is not expected to be severe. Precipitation in eastern great central valleys is expected to now be on the decrease, growing less relative to local normal amounts of this period of the year; precipitation on central and northern Pacific slope is expected to continue to be above normal. Principal cold waves of this period will be expected to center on 11 and 19 east of Rockies and on 14 and 19 west of Rockies. Most severe weather of January and also coldest period of the month will be expected to center on 23; cold waves centering on 19 and 26 will be general over the continent and will be expected to cause ten day period centering on 23 to average considerably below normal.

The evaporation center that will furnish principal precipitation for the North American continent during the first three months of 1927 will be located southwest of the continent; this will cause most precipitation to fall on southern and western slopes and land approaching those slopes; more precipitation on western than on southern slopes. Least precipitation will be expected on northern and eastern slopes and land approaching those slopes. Such forecasts refer to large areas of land, general average precipitation and considerable diferences in altitude; they are modified or entirely changed by other influences in smaller areas, such as section 9 and southern part of section 8 the southwest corner of the United States, which although sloping to the south and west is expected to be compartively dry relative to local normals of precipitation. Storm force in section 9 and southern part of 8 for the coming months will be of greater than usual intensity but that area is expected to be under such electro-magnetic influence during this period that will not be favorable to great amounts of precipitation within the area. The force that will be centralized in this southwestern evaporation area causing principal evaporation to be within this area is expected to be diminishing in power during the coming months. As this evaporation area is expected to furnish the principal precipitation for North America, precipitation for this continent will be expected to diminish during that period. But I have forecasted no serious drouth for any part of North America during the 1927 cropseason. General average precipitation of North America will be expected to diminish slightly during the balance of this winter and in early spring; diminish considerably during the latter part of next summer; this will cause rainfall shortage in considerable areas during August to October, inclusive, but average temperatures are expected to be below normal and evaporation is not expected to be severe.

Steel Market Is Working Up Says Iron Trade Review

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 15.—Iron Trade Review says:

Freight car awards totaling 10,000 have enlivened a steel market which is slowly working up from the low point of the holidays. The week's car business exceeds the 8,830 placed in all of last January, and since 20,000 cars are on active inquiry, the total of 30,555 ordered in the first quarter of 1926 may easily be surpassed in the current quarter.

Considered broadly, the tenor of the steel market is improving. In several departments, notably sheets and pipe, operating schedules are a shade lower than last week but on the whole, shipments of heavy finished material are slightly higher, less cold iron is being piled by steelworks blast furnaces, consumption in general is gaining moderately and some replenishment of record low inventories is under way. Steel corporation subsidiaries are operating at nearly 84 per cent, compared with 78 per cent last week. Independent producers are somewhat under 70 per cent.

Included in the freight cars placed this week are 3,120 by the Missouri Pacific, 2800 by the Santa Fe and 2500 by the Rock Island. The steel requirements of 100,000 tons, plus half that tonnage in other iron and steel products, will go chiefly to Chicago district mills. The railroads the past week have ordered 35,000 tons of rails, of which 25,900 tons were for the Nickel Plate. An eastern carrier is taking bids on 22,500 tons of finished steel for its first quarter program.

Pig iron sales of the past week approximate 150,000 tons, of which 100,000 tons represents business taken by southern producers following a reduction of $2 a ton, to $18, Birmingham. The market on Southern Ohio iron has given way 50 cents to $19.50, Ironton, in keeping with this trend. Sales at Cleveland exceed 25,000 tons. Sales in the Pittsburgh and Mahoning valley district have been light owing to the divided opinion concerning coke. A decision in regard to coke wages has not yet been made, and meanwhile, both melters and blast furnaces are loath to act.

Numerous Changes In Correspondents

Deaths And Change Of Occupations Alter List At Harrisburg

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 15.—When the Pennsylvania Legislature Correspondents' association meets for organization early in the present session of the legislature more old members will be missing than at any meeting since the inception of the organization more than 20 years ago.

Since the special session of the state legislature last January, two members have died and four other familiar figures about the legislative halls have left newspaper work.

John R. Ball and Harvey Smith, two Pittsburgh political writers, died less than a week apart just prior to the opening of the legislature. Both were frequently in Harrisburg working on special articles for the newspapers they represented. Ball's investigations here unearthed some of the biggest stories in the last decade.

A. Boyd Hamilton, a newspaper correspondent at the capitol for more than 20 years and a local representative of more than a score of newspapers has relinquished all his connections since his appointment as secretary to John S. Fisher, governor-elect.

Richard J. Beamish a special correspondent for one of the Philadelphia newspapers who covered the legislature during a number of sessions, now is serving as a member of the Public Service Commission. He was the second news writer to become a member of the commission, James Benn, formerly the city editor of the North American, having been appointed to the commission during the Sproul administration.

Edward Hunter appointed by Governor Gifford Pinchot as state director of Publications formerly worked for several Philadelphia newspapers and was a "regular" here at all legislative sessions.

Although few newspapermen ever retire, George Nox McCain a special writer for a Philadelphia paper for a quarter of a century has joined the ranks of those who actually rest after a life spent in that work.

The correspondents association here is composed to newspapermen actually engaged in reporterial work during the legislative sessions. Former members of the organization who no longer cover the sessions are carried as associate members.

DONNELLY LEADS ENTIRE FIELD FORCE

M. J. Donnelly, representative of the Edward A. Woods Company agency of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, has just received notice to the effect that he headed the entire field force of the Equitable Society in 1926 in the amount of new business written. This is an achievement of considerable importance, when it is considered that the Equitable has thousands of representatives in all parts of the country and that New Castle is one of the smaller centers in which this company has representatives and that in spite of this fact, that Mr. Donnelly was able to produce more business than any of the representatives of the society, regardless of where they might be located or the opportunities of writing business they might have. Mr. Donnelly is receiving the congratulations of his many associates in the business of the society.

Install Pipe Organ In New Third Church

Magnificent Instrument To Cost When Installed Approximately $13,000

A magnificent pipe organ has been purchased by the organ committee for the new Third Presbyterian church which is now in the course of erection at the corner of East Washington and Adams streets. It is a four-manual Moller organ with harp, chime and echo attachments. The price of the instrument when installed will be approximately $13,000. John A. Bell, organist of the First Presbyterian church of Pittsburgh, is the organ architect, and the local committee is composed of J. H. Kocher, William Wignall and Clair Lutz.

Work on the new edifice is progressing as rapidly as weather conditions permit. The outer walls are nearly completed and the roof will be placed in a week or ten days.
